Going bald?

A New York researcher has come to the conclusion that boozing prevents balding.

According to Dr. George DeLeon, winos he observed in New York's Bowery section were rarely - if ever - bald. De Leon wondered if their drinking habits were connected to their hairy pates, and set out to study the matter. After comparing baldness rates among groups of winos, academics, businessmen and shopkeepers, De Leon found that winos do indeed keep their hair longer than most other men. Only 36 percent of all winos interviewed by De Leon went bald, while 71 percent of the academics he interviewed had lost their hair. (Newsprint Credit: Psychology Today)
