

Mark's Ultra-Accurate Horoscopes

by Mark Cameron

Libra 9/23-10/22

Today will be a great one for you. You will get back an assignment with a good mark on it, and then money will rain down on you from the sky.

Scorpio 10/23-11/21

The answer to life's mysteries will be explained to you by a series of bizarre events. Don't dismiss the leprechaun's warnings as "imaginary".

Sagittarius 11/22-12/21

You should start a polka band. It's gonna be big!

Capricorn 12/22-1/19

Try to lay low this week while the whole exploding barbecue incident blows over. Time heals all wounds.

Aquarius 1/20-2/18

If you can figure out a way to lick the outside of your own elbow, then you will gain the ability to fly.

Pisces 2/19-3/20

If you find a door you didn't know existed in your house, do NOT go through it. It is a portal to the 80's, and we've all had enough of that.

Aries 3/21-4/19

It's time to trim that facial hair. Your unruly beard has a mind of its own and is trying to take over the world. Especially the Aries ladies.

Taurus 4/20-5/20

Why not steal all of your roommates left shoes to add a little excitement to their life?

Gemini 5/21-6/21

This week, try not to say the letter "p". Every time you say it, a squirrel will die. What did they ever do to you?

Cancer 6/22-7/22

You will single-handedly save the rainforest by writing really, really small on your assignments and saving paper.

Leo 7/23-8/22

Your special someone is thinking of great things for you. They are gonna come through with that extra body part you've been waiting for.

Virgo 8/23-9/22

The mighty blue Tick is on your side. Watch out evildoers! The time has finally come to reveal your super power. SPOON!

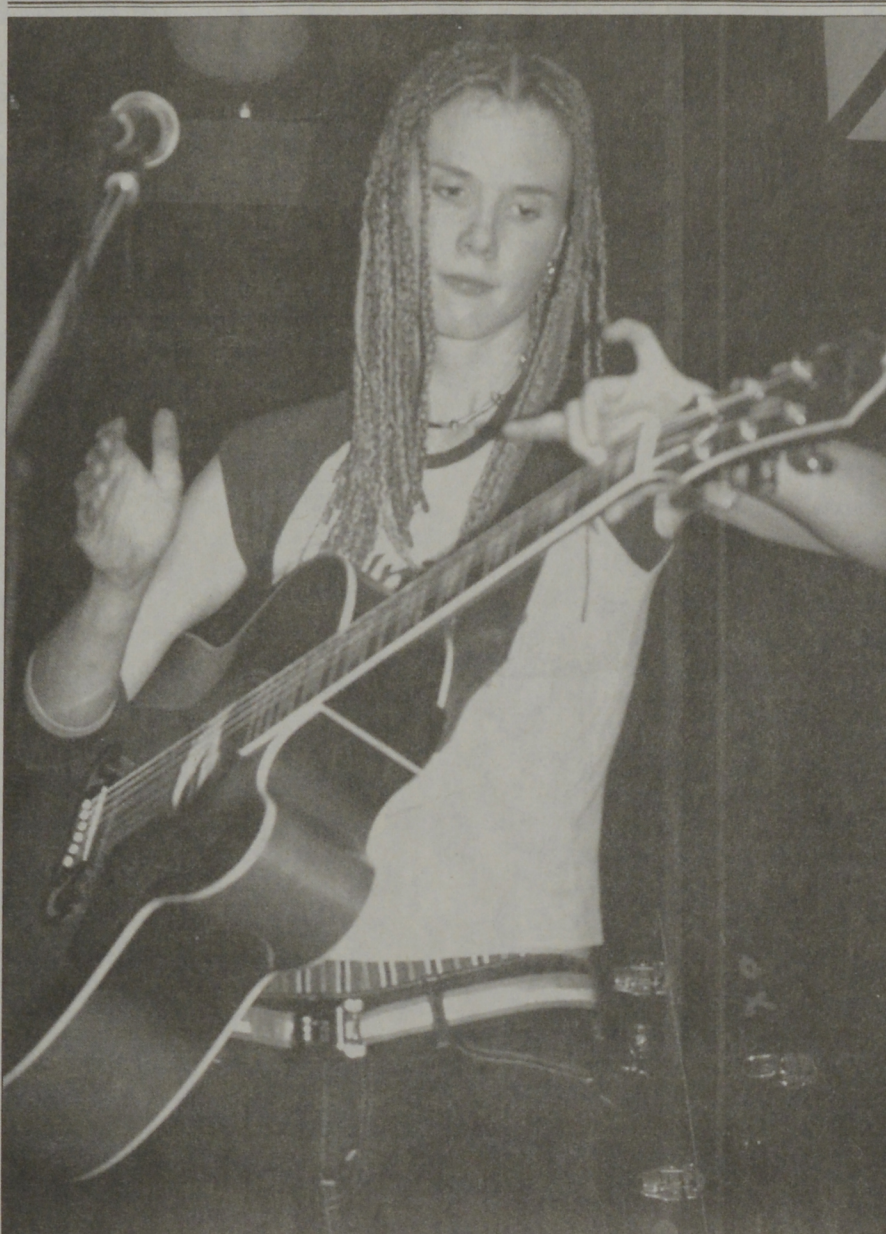

Win a copy of the new Supergrass album!

That's right, with a simple contest entry, you could win a copy of the new Supergrass album, Life On Other Planets, for free! The Brunswickan has several copies to give away (and if you're quick you might even get some other wicked goodies thrown in) and so we have this assignment for you:

We want you to show us what life on other planets would look like, should it exist. You can draw it, doodle it, write about it, whatever, but we want to know! You can drop off your entries at Room 35 of the SUB (just inside from the Cellar patio) or e-mail your entries to bruns@unb.ca. The truth is out there, and we want to hear about it!

Capital Film Society delivers 'Atanarjuat'

by Jeremy Elder

This year's Capital Films series gets off to a phenomenal start by showcasing a Canadian movie that has received rave reviews: Atanarjuat, also known as The Fast Runner, was directed by Zacharias Kunuk. Funded collaboratively by many agencies in Canada - including the National Film Board and the Aboriginal Peoples Network - Atanarjuat is quite possibly the first Inuit movie most people will see; and it's an amazing one at that.

Atanarjuat adapts an ancient Inuit legend: An evil force called upon by a malevolent shaman wreaks havoc between rivals, culminating in a death. A generation later, this conflict continues between the respective sons of two of these rivals, Oki (Peter-Henry Arnatsiak), and Atanarjuat (Natar Ungalaaq) and his brother Amaqjuaq (Pakkak Innushuk). Their conflict is spurred on in no small part by Atuat (Sylvia Ivalu), who is Oki's betrothed, but ultimately marries Atanarjuat.

This movie is the stuff of myth and legend; elements such as magic (though this plays a fairly subtle role), feuding and betrayal make it in many ways comparable to Shakespeare - though it comes from a people whose stories and minds were untouched by European influence until the 1930s. Most importantly, though, this film is a glimpse into Inuit culture; a rare gift indeed, and, with its formidable vistas and an epic tale told in its native tongue, Inuktitut (yes, the film is subtitled), this gift is simply spectacular.

Atanarjuat plays at Capital Films Monday, October 7th. The screening will be in Tilley 102 at 8:00 pm, and admission prices are as follows: Members, $3.00; non-members, $7.00; non-member students and seniors, $5.00. Playing time is 172 minutes.
