Graduate Studies in CANCER RESEARCH

Interested in Interdisciplinary Medical Research, from Biology to Physics? Join the Department of Medical Biophysics at the University of Toronto.

Areas of research:
- Molecular Genetics of Cancers
- Cellular & Molecular Biology
- Medical Physics & Imaging
- Molecular & Structural Biology

Background? The Department welcomes applications from graduates in any of the biological or physical sciences including molecular biology, chemistry, biology, genetics, immunology, and biochemistry, or from medicine, engineering, physics, computer science, or any related science.

Requirement? The minimum requirement is a four-year bachelor's degree from a recognized college or university with at least an A- average in the final two years. This guideline is flexible for applicants who have demonstrated exceptional aptitude for research.

Degrees offered? MSc and PhD.

Deadline? Applications will be considered at any time. However, to have the best chances for receiving special University of Toronto Fellowships, applications should be received by February 1st.

Financial Support? All students accepted into the Department receive complete financial support. The current minimum stipend is $22,000 per year.
