

Chiarello stops 19 shots against STU in his return

Although it had been an extremely long layoff for him, Chiarello said he was "not nervous, just more eager" going into the game. "There was a lot of anticipation, there was a lot of hype surrounding the game obviously because it was with STU and there was a good crowd out there so I certainly didn't want to disappoint anybody that came to watch the game."

He certainly didn't, as the appreciative Aitken Centre crowd applauded every save he made, and even his arch-rivals in the other dressing room had nothing but good things to say.

"It's great to see him back," said STU goalie Aaron Molnar. "It's tough to see a good guy like that go through what he went through and it's nice to see him come back... We wanted to beat him, no doubt about that, but it's just good to see him back out there."

Reds captain Craig Mahon, who played with Chiarello before his battle with brain cancer, described seeing his teammate return to the ice as "unbelievable."

"Just looking at the guy getting ready to go out there on the ice, I had chills on the back of my spine," said Mahon.

MacDougall said he also had "total shivers" from head to toe when Chiarello was announced as the starting goaltender.

"Just to be a small part of it, to be able to write his name in our starting lineup tonight, those are special moments."

"Tonight was a great opportunity for him to get back in there and fulfill the dream and fulfill his public announcement last year when he came down here," said MacDougall. "He's got fire and he's got passion. When he made that statement, it was a bold statement. And aren't dreams, the bolder you have them, the more successful they are?"

Why Chester Taylor is important

Our resident Fantasy Football guru takes a look at the NFL's running back situation

THE ENDZONE

TODD SPENCER

Here's your chance if you have a weak running game. With Jamal Lewis suspended for a few weeks by the NFL, it's important to check out who will be getting the carries while he's gone.

Chester Taylor looks to be the front-runner for the most carries, with Musa Smith possibly getting a few touches here and there. Personally, even with Edgerrin James and Corey Dillon on my team, I don't have much for depth besides Tyrone Wheatley. James is off next week too, so I'll be picking up Taylor.

There are also some questions about Jerome Bettis in Pittsburgh. My advice is to pick him up, because he's getting the touchdowns but on a downside is getting very few yards. He's being used mostly in short yard situations, but in the long run, touchdowns are worth more than yards in most leagues.

Rumours are swirling around Ricky Williams and a possible return to the Dolphins. Should you pick him up? No. I don't expect to see him in a uniform this season.

One thing I know a lot of fantasy players are having trouble with this fall is picking wide receivers. I find in a lot of cases this season that quarterbacks are a little less set on one receiver and seem to be sending the ball in other directions. I came across this last weekend with Reche Caldwell in San Diego. Drew Brees is throwing all over the place, but it's effective. San Diego has a team this year, and so do the Cardinals!

Here are my picks to click for this coming weekend:

1. Chester Taylor, RB, Baltimore
2. Lee Evans, WR, Buffalo (its ok, they are playing the Dolphins)
3. David Carr, QB, Houston - 372 passing yards, 3 passing TD's...WOW

Who to trade:

1. Onterio Smith, RB, Minnesota - there has to be somebody looking for running help, even when he does return I expect Bennett to be doing most of the running.

2. Tommy Maddox, QB, Pittsburgh - check out the depth in your league, somebody might be interested in him.

3. Drew Brees, QB, San Diego - how long will it last? Trade him while he's hot!

That's all I have this week guys. Just on a side note, the NHL opened up its season this past week. Here are the scores:
