TWIG (Tuff Writing Interesting Group) is a friendly writing circle created to encourage the art of writing. We will meet on the third Thursday of every month, and both new and mature writers are welcome. Participation in this writing circle includes submitting our own texts, and evaluating other participants' work. There will be no 'mother' to make tea or coffee for us at our monthly meeting, though the kitchen will be available for individual forays in that direction. Every once in a while, TWIG will invite established writers to read us their work, and to share with us their thoughts on the process of writing. Every year, the poetry-reading series, odd sundays at molly's, will invite TWIG members, as a group, to read their work to the public. TWIG is open to all who are interested in writing, in whatever form they practice their art. Bring pencils, paper, ears attuned to listening, and your love of writing. Info: acalvern@nbnet.nb.
