The New York Dog Show.

Nearly 1,000 dogs were on exhibition at the third annual Bench Show of the Westminster Kennel Club, in Gilmore's Garden, New York. Crowds thronged the garden in the afternoon and evening, and even more interest was manifested in the exhibition than was shown last year. The boxes containing the dogs were arranged in an ellip tical form about the garden, and each bore a number. There were three rows of kennels extending around the garden, two facing the track used in the walking match and one looking directly into the large open space in the center of the building. The numbers on the kennels were arranged in consecutive order, and it was very easy to find any animal from the catalogue.

The sights about the garden during the afternoon were curious. Many club men accompanied by ladies were present, and as thy passed from kennel to kennel the liveliest expressions of admiration were heard for the smooth, silky fur and the "perfectly lovely "eyes of the pets. Among the visitors in the afternoon was Henry Bergh, who examining apparently with a professional animals comfortable. He thought the ex- | train of evils. hibition was a very creditable one.

Unaccustomed to the strange and end. unusual surroundings, the dogs kept up a continual barking and yelping that, as night drew near, and as they grew hungry, became almost deafening. Despite this, however, hundreds of persons spent hours in watching the lazy mastiffs, the bright-eyed sporting dogs and the frolicksome poodles, while the numerous litters of puppies were a source of endless enjoyment to the children. Armed with catalogues, visitors went the rounds of the garden, patting the harmless-looking animals, whose sleek coats were as smooth as velvet, and keeping a respectful distance from the boxes marked "Don't touch," or "Hands off." The men appeared to be most interested in the large collection of sporting dogs, while the ladies went into ecstacies over the little pugs, toy terriers and poodles, some of which were very diminutive, and all of which were combed and brushed especially for the occasion.

The majority of the animals were in boxes of ordinary size, in which were bed of straw. Many of the kennels, however, were furnished with soft rugs and mats, and presented a very pretty appearance. The prohibition was short, however, and he soon returned in obedience to the familing whistle and was tied up again. A huge hound was taken out of his kennel in the afternoon, and sprang away, dragging his master down the garden at a fearful pace, to the great amusement of the specta-

Owing somewhat to the situation of the kennels, the interest of uncritical spectators centered around the boxes of the terriers and pugs, which were arranged in the middle of the floor from east to west. Many ladies and gentlemen well known in social circles had sent their pets to the exhibition, and naturally the little animals, most of them with silver collars and daintily decked out in bright-colored ribbons, attracted much notice and favorable comment. ## Automatic Machinery.

An extraordinary statement in regard to the introduction of automatic machinery into some factories not far from Low Moor, near Bradford, England, has appeared in the Warehouseman and Drapers' Trade Journal. The writer says: "We have visited the Oak mills by night, in company with Mr. Burns and a friend. The building itself was in darkness, but we could hear the rumble of machinery as we approached. The door was unlocked and couple of candles were lighted. By the dim light we saw the machines all at work, and passing from one to another we noted also what they were producing. There was no possibility of deception, and no room for doubt. were not there to examine the construct tion of the machinery; it was sufficient to be able to verify the main fact—which is that when the working hours of the mills are over, the lights are put out, the building is locked up and the machines are left working all through the night, producing large quantities of beautiful articles in great variety of patterns in silk, cotton and wool." The method by which this result has been attained remains a secret. The only night attendant at the factory appears to be an en-gineer, inasmuch as the engine and boiler cannot be left to themselves.

History on Bark.

A short time ago a discovery of several mounds, evidently artificially constructed and not the handiwork of nature, was made at what is known as Sheridan's drive, on a range of hills immediately to the west of Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Within these mounds were traces of stonework as artistic and nearly perfect as that of the present day. A party went to the mounds and found a sort of book of records, written, or transcribed rather, upon pieces of bark, and placed together like the leaves of a book and tied with smaller pieces of bark. Among the exploring party was a gentleman from Boston, who had made the language of Mexico a study, and who, upon examination of the records found in the mounds, found a similarity between the writings of Mexico during the time of the Monte-

Concerning Railroads.

Mr. Oliver Garrison, vice-president of the Missouri Pacific railroad, and brother of Commodore C. K. Garrison. stated a few days ago, that 12,000 mile of new railroad are to be built next summer, in the United States, all to be laid with new steel rails, and that 8,000 rails in one year will exhaust the supply. Most of these additional roads will b constructed in the West and Northwest One of the singular features of railroad traffic in the United States to which the Railroad Gazette calls attention, is the stagnation of the passenger traffic on nearly all the leading lines of railroad. While the freight traffic has increased more than seventy-five per cent. in the last seven or eight years, the passenger business is at a standstill. There were actually fewer passengers carried to the mile of road on nearly every leading road in the country in 1877 or 1878 than in 1870, or in any o the three years following it.

It is the general practice to open only the lower part of the windows of a room in ventilating it, whereas if the upper part were also opened, the object would be more speedily effected.

In cleansing the sewer there were found a quantity of ancient lamps with gladiatorial ornamentation, human skulls and bones of animals. Much of the old Roman road in the Foro Romano is now exposed to view, and the ruins of the hops of gold and silversmiths are visible.
