

SEAT OF THE MUSES.

From the (London) Morning Post.

ODE TO BONAPARTE.

CHIEF CONSUL! Hero of Marengo!
Are you gone mad, or drunk with stingo;
That fame and fortune quitting,
Nothing will serve your Highness now,
But fierce Invasion (fie) you Coward!
Of poor, little Britain?

Your victory at Algerias,
Where Saumarez in such hot fire was,
I tell you, without flattery,
Was gain'd—deny it if you can—
Not by your fleet, but—O you Hannibal!
A Spanish batt'ry.

Indeed, great Monsieur Bonaparte,
One can't refrain from laughing hearty,
To hear the pompous story
Of this exploit that you advance,
Boasting how it has cover'd France's naval name with glory!

But when you read in our Gazette,
The drubbing poor Linea did get
From Saumarez soon after;
I think, my little Corsican,
'Twill cool your courage, check your vanity, and stop your laughter.

If you intend to keep your Throne,
Now let invading us alone—
'Tis dangerous and evil;
Remember—gun-boats may be sunk—
Remember Nelson, whether drunk
Or sober—he's the Devil!

LONDON, Sept. 17.

Yesterday advices were received by Government from the Mediterranean. Porto Ferrajo continues to make a most determined and obstinate resistance against the Republican assailants; and Rear Admiral Sir John Borlase Warren, with seven sail of the line, is about to commence the blockade of Toulon. A French frigate, which, in company with another ship of the same description, was escorting some vessels laden with ammunition for the siege of Porto Ferrajo, has been captured by some of our cruisers off the coast of Tuscany. The accounts from France admit this circumstance; but of the fate of the transports no mention is made.

Yesterday morning a Messenger arrived at Lord Hawkebury's Office, with dispatches from the Earl of Elgin, dated the 26th ult. inclosing some letters from General Sir J. H. Hutchinson to Lord Hobart, of the date of July 25.

At that time the British Chief was at Cairo, at the head of 20,000 effective troops, and expected to be joined the first week in August by a division of the Indian army, under the orders of Gen. Baird.

The troops from Europe had not arrived at the date of these advices; but the allied force was nevertheless so formidable as to induce General Hutchinson to determine upon an immediate attack of the fortresses of Alexandria.

General Menou continued obstinately to reject the liberal terms of the Convention of Cairo; and, though much in want of flour, wine, and oil, had declared his resolution to resist every overture that might be made to him. This obstinacy proceeds it is believed, from an expectation entertained by the enemy of the speedy arrival of the promised succours from France; but his hopes in this respect are so seemingly vain, that a short time, it is hoped will evince his total want of prudence in refusing, under his present circumstances, to accept the fair and honourable conditions offered him.

A strong detachment of English and Imperial troops had escorted the vanquished French and their partisans from Cairo to Rosetta, where they had begun to embark on board a number of ships provided by the English for the purpose of conveying them to France. They consisted altogether of 12,700 men, and were expected to sail by the 8th of August.

The accounts, we are sorry to add, state that our troops were somewhat sickly, though happily but few had hitherto fallen sacrifices. Mr. Moiz, the Commissary General, was dead, and among the sick were Generals Hutchinson, Doyle, and Craddock. The official accounts are expected to appear in the Gazette of this evening.

An English and Turkish fleet has appeared near Ragusa, to prevent the French from crossing the Adriatic into Greece. A Russian ship of the line and some smaller vessels have arrived at Naples, to take away the Neapolitan troops.

The French troops which are to evacuate the Batavian Republic are immediately to return to France, and General Angereau is shortly expected at Brussels.

Private letters from Paris mention, that the Irish Emigrants in that city are very much in disgrace with the First Consul. This is attributed to the irregularity of the lives of some of their principal agents; to a detection of the falshood of their statement of the strength of their party at home, in which they indulged in all the exaggeration so common to exiles; and to the disgust naturally inspired by the ill success of all the expeditions hitherto fitted out by the Republic against Ireland.

Mr. Grenville Penn is appointed Under-Secretary of State in the War Department.

Lord St. Vincent was on Saturday so much recovered as to be able to attend at the Admiralty.

SAINT JOHN,

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1801.

The Courts of Sessions and Common Pleas were opened this morning, and it must afford the highest satisfaction to the Public to be informed that not a single offence had been committed since the last sessions to be given in charge to the Grand Jury.

The Recorder embraced this opportunity of congratulating the Jury upon the return of the Blessings of Peace, and recounted in a very concise and perspicuous manner the brilliant achievement of His Majesty's arms both by Sea and Land in the late war, the importance of the acquisitions in point of Territory secured by the Treaty with France, and we trust satisfied the Jury and the rest of the audience, that the Peace is really Honorable and Glorious to Great-Britain, and promises to be permanent and highly advantageous to the nation at large, and particularly to this Infant Province, in which to use the Recorder's own expression "we may predict that the wilderness will soon be seen to blossom as the rose."

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman at the Parish of St. Martin's, dated November 28th, 1801.

On the 21st inst. the Commissioners finished opening a road from hence to the road at the Little Kennebecasis or Hammond River in Hampton, since which several Persons have passed to and from this place on Horseback, to the great satisfaction of the Inhabitants.

Capt. Bowra cannot omit this opportunity of returning his grateful thanks to Captains Thomson and Ross of Baltimore—Capt. Coffin of Philadelphia—Captains Dunlap and Tattem of Santa Cruz, and all others, (whose names he cannot now remember) for their liberal and timely assistance, in contributing to his relief and that of his fellow prisoners, during their confinement in the goal of St. Jago de Cuba, which afforded them a comfortable subsistence in their distressed situation.

St. John, Nov. 17, 1801.

By His EXCELLENCY

Sir John Wentworth, Bart. L. L. D. Surveyor-General of Woods in the Province of Nova-Scotia, and all His Majesty's Territories in North-America.

WHEREAS it has been represented to me that Trespasses have been committed in several places in the Province of Nova-Scotia and New-Brunswick, by cutting, felling, and destroying, White Pine Trees, by Persons unknown, contrary to Law.

This therefore is to notify and forwarn all Persons to forbear from cutting, felling, or hauling away any White Pine Timber from His Majesty's Woods, all such being reserved by Acts of Parliament for His Majesty's service; and they are further cautioned not to trespass upon any Pine or other Timber standing or growing upon Tracts of Land especially reserved for the King's service, nor in any case to take White Pine, or other reserved Timber as aforesaid, without Licence first had and obtained, as they value and esteem their character for loyalty and honesty; and as they would avoid the penalties of the Law which will most certainly be inflicted upon all offenders who may be discovered after this repeated Notification.
