

NIGHT.

How beautiful is this winter's night. The softest whisper told by tender lass, is discord to such speaking silence, as shadows this snow-bound earth. The sky is almost black and far away, and so arched that the stars do not appear directly from the vault; but as if suspended. All the little ones that just twinkle in the greater light of others, blaze to night with strange prophetic meaning. The moon, unconscious of other rivalry, moves through the glittering crowd that part to let her pass; save where a resplendent one, rather than turn aside, drops from its place, or shoots across the sky, followed by a long train of light. The silver twaw has covered all around with a thick crust, that now sparkles like another sky with a white back ground. How all the various changes of the past run through one's mind at such an hour as this; and nothing we have ever done is worthy of remembrance, when everything we see speaks the Author's immensity.

Deep! solemn night! that the sacred purity of this hour should be polluted by crimes, that daylight would darken to witness.

Yet thou art a kind nurse to the heart broken and afflicted, that through the hazy day wear no semblance of woe; the mask falls with sky shadows, and none but the soother of grief witnesses their tears. PUSA.

PETITCODIAC BRANCH BIBLE SOCIETY.

A meeting was held at the Petitcodiac Hall on Monday evening, the 8th inst., for the purpose of organizing a Bible Society in that place. Mr. Russell, Agent for the Auxiliary Society, addressed the meeting in a most interesting manner, on the "Rise and Progress of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

After the address a Society was formed, upwards of twenty dollars subscribed, and the following officers appointed:

John R. Crandall, Esq., President; Rev. W. J. Bleakney, Rev. J. R. Parker, and Major C. Willis, and Joseph McCordick, Esq., Vice Presidents; Hugh Davidson, Esq., Treasurer; W. C. Fleming, Esq., Depository; Miss Hettie Crandall, Secretary.

COMMITTEE.

Hiram Humphreys, G. M. Bleakney, John Hetherington, Elias J. Peck, Geo. W. McCready, H. G. Trites, Thomas M. Colpitts, John P. Jones, A. Killam, R. Thompson, William Robertson, Israel Steeves, John Cleveland, O. E. Jewelling, Esqs.

COLLECTORS.

Mrs. Samuel Heustis, Mrs. James Crawford, Mrs. Thomas Herritt, Mrs. Benjamin Colpitts, Miss Adelaide Killam, Miss Adelaide Cleveland, Miss Lavinia Price, Miss Caroline Holmes, Miss Georgia Humphrey, Miss Ada Hayward, Miss Amanda Colpitts, and Miss Ruth Taylor

Our local members will doubtless look after our bye-roads this season; some of which are in a bad state. The road to Butternut Ridge via Major Willi- should have a special grant, and be placed on the Great Road List; also the road to Pollette River requires special attention. Though the expenditure has already been heavy, much more requires to be done. It is too bad that the flourishing districts of Polette River, Elgin and Prosser Brook should be compelled to travel through mud year after year for the want of $1,000 judiciously laid out; and when we consider that in addition to the farming operations carried on in those places, thousands of dollars worth of lumber is transported annually from the mills of Messrs. Baxter, Colpitts and McQuiston, the necessity of a turnpike can be easily imagined, as in the summer months we have frequently seen those victimized operators stick in the mud, with a load of 400 feet of boards.

Our St. John subscribers will in future get their papers at the Colonial Bookstore on the tenth of each month.

The Rev. W. J. Bleakney, who has had charge of the Baptist Church at Petitcodiac, for the last twelve months, is being strongly solicited to remain in charge for another year. This speaks well for all parties concerned.

The Rev. Mr. Day, who is on the Salisbury and Elgin Circuit, preached at the Petitcodiac Hall on Sunday evening, the 28th February, to a large audience. He appears to be a young man of much promise.

We have been compelled to hold over some most valuable certificates, as well as other matter, for want of space.

To W. PRICE.—Dear Sir.—My horses had a very bad cough, and I was advised to use your "White Liniment" with their oats. I did so, with great satisfaction, as a complete cure was effected by the same.

D. McFER, Pictou, N. S.

A MYSTERIOUS CURE.

A few months ago I took a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, where it remained without relaxation. I was then in the lumber woods, and growing worse and becoming unable to attend to my work. I returned home and commenced searching in earnest for some medicine which would restore my lost health. I consulted the Sussex doctors—I tried many remedies, but obtained no help, and daily grew worse. I had a terrible cough and raised a good deal of blood. I had profuse night sweats and severe pain in my side. I continued in this state for about two months, and became so weak that it was with great difficulty I could walk, when I was advised by a friend to use Price's Pancremata, and to my great joy I soon found that this remedy had arrested the disease. I continued to use this medicine to the extent of six bottles, and have since then experienced no difficulty of the lungs. Thus has your invaluable medicine, which many persons in this vicinity can testify, literally snatched me from the yawning grave. You are at liberty to use this for the benefit of those similarly afflicted.

Yours most respectfully,

JOHN FREEZE,

Upper Sussex, April 15, 1868.
