The Liberals of York Get Into Line for Good Government

ceive assistance from the government. Perhaps the most serious matter which confronted the people of New Brunswick at the present time was the depletion of the Crown Lands under the reckless management of the Fleming government. Only those lands with their fast decreasing forests stood between the people of the province and direct taxation. (Hear! Hear!) Yet that forest wealth was being swept away. It was time a stop was put to that destruction.

The water-powers of the country were being handed out as fast as possible to private owners and corporations. Mr. Copp says "conserve the natural resources." The Fleming government was giving them away to the crowd of franchise-seekers which clamored at the doors of the legislature.

Mr. Hughes, amid cheers, then moved the following resolution, endorsing Mr. Copp as leader of the opposition, the resolution being adopted unanimously:

Resolved That the electors of York in this convention assembled, express their gratification and approval of the work done by Mr. A. B. Copp as leader having won him enormous triumphs in the last session of the legislature, his treatment of public questions and familiarity with parliamentary work as leader having won him enormous triumphs from all sides.

And further Resolved, That we express our fullest approval of the platform recently laid down by our respected leader.

Putting the resolution to the convention Mr. R. W. McLellan paid a tribute to Mr. Copp for the efficiency which he had displayed in the one brief session of the legislature during which he had been leader of the opposition.

ALD. MOORE RESIGNS

Ald Edward Moore for some years president of the Liberal Association of York County tendered his resignation in the following letter:

To The Members of The Liberal Convention Assembled This Day.

Gentlemen—I have had the honor of holding the office of Chairman of the Liberal Association for York for a great many years. I have now reached the time of life when advancing years and on account of ill health I should desire that my successor should be appointed.

In tendering my resignation I desire, however, to say that never in my life have my beliefs in the principles of the Liberal Party been any firmer and stronger, and I will continue to do everything in my power, to uphold the party and its leaders.

The unanimous support I have received from the Liberals of York during my long connection with the office continues today, and the ticket nominated by the Convention today in opposition to the Fleming government will have my hearty support.

I believe that the time has arrived for a change. In Mr. Copp we have a remarkable leader, and one who has accomplished wonders in a short time. He is the man for the job, and if I do not miss my guess, I expect to see him Premier after the 20th of this month.

Wishing our Candidates every success, I am,

Yours very truly,

EDWARD MOORE

NEW PRESIDENT APPOINTED

In a brief address, Ald. Moore expressed the regret he felt but pressure of business, failing health and other causes had compelled him to take the step he had. His best wishes would always be with the party, however. The chairman and Mr. N. W. Brown of Southampton, both expressed heartiest appreciation of the services which Ald. Moore had rendered to the Liberal party in the past and regretted that he had found it necessary to resign the chairmanship.

Mr. McLellan was proposed for the vacant office, but on the suggestion of Mr. George W. Hodge, which was supported by Mr. McLellan, himself, the selection of a chairman to succeed Ald. Moore was left to a committee, which decided upon Dr. A. B. Atherton. Further progress toward organization was made by the appointment of Mr. S. B. Hatheway of Springhill, as secretary of the association.

The delegates from the various polling districts then retired to choose a ticket. Ex-Coun. C. N. Goodspeed was asked if he were willing to permit his name to go before the convention, but for personal reasons declined. While the delegates were making their selection there were short addresses by Ex-Coun. Goodspeed and Mr. N. W. Brown.

C. N. GOODSPEED

Ex-Coun Goodspeed stated that the province for about five years past had as poor a government as it possibly could have. Broken pledges were the most prominent thing about the government. The Highway Act was one of the main instruments in the defeat of the Robinson government, yet at the present time the highways were not as good as they were five years ago (Voice—"They're worse") The taxes for road purposes had been doubled and yet the roads were as bad as ever. The time was at hand when the County of York should do its duty and though it would be a hard, uphill fight he felt that the county would do its best. Personally he was prepared to do his utmost.

N. W. BROWN

Mr. N. W. Brown of Southampton was called upon for an address. It would be remembered he said that when the Farmers' and Dairymen's Association was in session it was stated that practical farmers on the floors of the House of Assembly were lacking. This was the chance for the farmer to get in his work. He had nothing to say against Dr. Landry personally, but there was absolutely no comparison between a commissioner of agriculture of that stamp and one like Hon. L. P. Farris, who could give a farmer his own personal experiences of great value.

The decision of the delegates was then announced amid enthusiasm and the candidates were called upon for addresses.

GEORGE F. BURDEN

Mr. George F. Burden, Ex-M.P.P., stated that he had come to the convention prepared to decline nomination but he had changed his mind when pressed to step into the gap. He felt highly honored on account of being selected as standard bearer. It would be a hard uphill fight but he had courage and prospects were bright all over the province. Life long conservatives were turning in every county.

One of the most encouraging signs of the times was the fact that even in York, which the Conservatives had claimed as a stronghold, former supporters of the Fleming government were renouncing their party allegiance every day, the manner in which public business had been carried on in the county during the past four years having thoroughly disgusted them.

He had been informed by E. B. Carvell that in Carleton, the government had offered to allow one opposition candidate to be returned without a contest if the opposition party would permit the other two seats, in the county to be taken by the government on similar terms. It was hardly necessary to say that the offer had been promptly turned down. (Applause.)

The people had seen through Mr. Fleming's scheme with regard to the St. John Valley railway. They saw that the intention was to turn that important section of the province traversed by the line over to the tender mercies of the C. P. R. (Cheers.) What was wanted was I. C. R. operation of that railway and that was provided for in the platform of Mr. Copp.

W. J. OSBORNE

Mr. W. J. Osborne stated that the moment was a proud one. Fifteen years ago he had come to Fredericton a young man. He was a Liberal then and had remained one. That was the only politics for a young man. (Hear! Hear!) He had been surprised when nomination had been offered him but he had been willing to step into the breach and do his best. In Mr. Copp the Liberals of New Brunswick had a magnificent leader, one who had been successful though holding the leadership but a short time. He felt sure, after glancing over those before him in convention assembled, that the Tory stronghold of York would suffer a severe invasion. The government party had shown that it was entirely a Conservative party and those Liberals who formerly voted for that party would not do so on June 20th (Applause.)

ALEX. LITTLE

Mr. Alex. Little followed in a brief address. He felt that there was an excellent opportunity to win. One great reason why he had accepted nomination was to help Mr. Copp carry out his promises. One most important plank of Mr. Copp's platform had not been mentioned—that was an improved rural telephone system. He came from a district which was blessed with a telephone system which in matter of cost was within reach of the humblest. Mr. Copp's platform, he was pleased to note, contained a pledge for the extension of such a system all through the province.

The government talked of bringing in immigrants to take the vacant farms of the province. One native kept on the land was worth ten imported farmers. (Applause.) Cheap telephones would aid in keeping them on the land.

Mr. Little also drew attention to the manner in which the government had permitted the rights to develop the water powers of the province to pass into the possession of private owners instead of preserving them, as other provinces had done, for the people—the rightful owners. (Cheers.) Electric power would solve the problem of farm labor, if properly applied.

The party led by Mr. Copp had been called by the hired press which supported the Fleming party "The old government," and the cry was raised that New Brunswick should not return to the old state of affairs. What was there old about what the opposition party had to offer? It was a new platform, including planks which showed the party was abreast of the times. Liberalism always denoted advance and progress in New Brunswick as elsewhere. (Applause.)

He felt that he could close his remarks with the statement that there were good prospects of a victory on the 20th, and none knew that better than did the government party. (Cheers.)

WALTER LIMERICK

Walter Limerick, in a brief address, made some telling points against the Fleming government's policy for settlement of the vacant lands by immigration. And cheers, he said that if the policy pursued by the present government remained in force for any great length of time there would be no place in New Brunswick for the young man, as the corporations would own the province.

The government was doing its best to hand everything over to the C. P. R. The Central Railway, Minto Railway and the St. John Valley Railway. Instead of permitting the latter road to become part of the C. P. R. system, the electors should see that the policy of ownership by the people and I. C. R. operation, as outlined in the platform of Mr. Copp, should be put into effect.

As far as Mr. Fleming's settlers were concerned, said the speaker, he had had personal experience of them, having had five of them in his employ. One had left him, accompanied by $50 of his. (Laughter.) Of the others he had found the majority no good. Mr. Limerick closed his remarks with a forecast of a contest in York which would surprise the government.
