HOW THE YEGGMAN GETS IN HIS WORK

Of all the thieves and crooks that operate in the country the yeggmán, or bank burglar, is the most cunning and systematic and in the majority of cases the most desperate. Some people have an idea that a common tramp housebreaker is a yeggmán, but that is far from the truth. In nine cases out of ten yeggmán are intelligent, educated men. There is a bond between them as strong as that which united any brotherhood or union in the country.

There are not more than fifty good yeggs in the United States. To be successful the yegg must understand every little detail of the work, because a slip usually means a life. When a man becomes too old or is disabled or for any other cause cannot remain an active member of his gang he then instructs the younger and less experienced members. In all the time that I have been connected with bank investigations, says a yegg hunter in The New York Sun, I have never known of a case in which one yeggmán double crossed another, and I didn't think that can be said of any other branch of thieftom. I will explain some of the methods used by the yeggs, also some used by the investigators.

Four or five men usually make up a gang and these gangs are scattered over the whole country, each having its own territory. For instance, one gang has the territory between Albany and Boston on the Boston and Albany road. In that case the members would be scattered out along the road between Boston and Albany looking for a bank or post office which may be easily blown. It sometimes takes them six months or even a year to locate the job and get everything in readiness for the "touch off," as they call it. One successful job with these men equals a great many small hauls that other thieves make.

When the job is spotted the gang is called together and every detail is gone over and the plans are mapped out. Each member looks over the bank and the discussion of methods sometimes lasts a week. I once knew of a gang operating in Indiana who were in doubt about a job and who sought advice from a gang in Maine. That probably took three or four weeks. I mention this to show that they absolutely will not "turn a trick" if there is the least doubt about its success.

After the job is located and their plans are settled the next thing they do is to get the tools and make their preparations. Common yellow soap, fuse, caps and nitroglycerine are needed. This soap, fuse and caps are easily obtained at any hardware or grocery, but the nitroglycerine is not so easy to get. If no other method is available it must be taken out of dynamite sticks, and that is almost an art in itself, being a very dangerous process.

For an ordinary shot they take five-pound sticks of dynamite to make enough nitroglycerine, or "soup" as they call it, for the job. The utensils consist of two lard cans and a quart whisky bottle. The bottom is knocked out of one of the lard cans and holes made all around the sides. A charcoal fire is then built and the lard is set on it. Then the other can is filled half full of water and placed on the first. The water is allowed to become lukewarm, and then the sticks of dynamite are placed in the water. The whole affair stands about six hours.

After that time the water is allowed to cool and is then strained through a piece of cheesecloth, after which it is again allowed to stand. In a short time the nitroglycerine rises to the surface and is skimmed off and placed in the bottle. The yeggs call this process "making soup." Several times it has resulted seriously and in one instance, when it blew the operator's arm off, it led to the capture of two of the best men in what was known as the E. and T. H. gang.

It sometimes takes as many as three shots to blow a safe. Four holes are drilled around the combination knob and the nitroglycerine is poured in the holes, spap funnels being used. A dynamite cap and fuse are then attached, wet blankets are thrown over the safe and the shot is touched off. The men inside throw themselves face downward on the floor.

After the smoke has cleared the safe is sometimes found ready to be rifled. Often there is a strong box which the first shot does not harm. In that case a second and sometimes a third shot must be fired off in the same manner as the first.

In case the citizens hear the explosion the men who are watching outside give the inside men the alarm and endeavor to hold the town at bay, giving their inside pals a chance for a clean getaway with the plunder.

UNVEILS MONUMENT TO GENERAL BROCK

Brockville, Aug. 19.—Brockville was in holiday attire this afternoon the occasion being the unveiling of the monument erected on the green in front of the Court House by the General Brock Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire. Several hundred people surrounded the specially erected platform at the side of the monument. Col. Hughes, Minister of Militia accompanied by Col. Biggar, A. D. C., came in from Ottawa and performed the unveiling. He was met by a guard of honor from the 41st Regiment under command of Lieut.-Col. W. D. Buell, and the Brass Band. Mrs. A. E. Gooderham of Toronto, National President of the Daughters of the Empire, also graced the occasion by her presence.

Mayor C. W. MacLean presided and after an address of welcome to the Minister, Col. Hughes pulled from the bronze features of the monument a large Union Jack while the band played the National Anthem.

HOW BROCK SAVED CANADA

After tracing the origin of the war of 1812-13 Col. Hughes said that had Brock failed in his last Canada would certainly now be part of the United States. Under his command was the 41st Regiment and the city which does honor to his name has still the same regiment. The regiment has had four successive Colonels each representing a generation of the Buell family, the fourth being the present commanding officer.

GREAT BRITAIN'S NEED

Proceeding the Minister reiterated some of his remarks made in Vancouver this month. He said: "The days have not yet come when Great Britain ceases to have enemies. It is recognized throughout the length and breadth of the Empire that she has enemies in Europe. She must control the seas, but we find attempts made by one European nation to arrest this control."

CANADA MUST DO HER SHARE
"The time has arrived," he continued, "when Canadians have determined to do their fair share in the up-building of England's navy. Australia and South Africa point with pride to their contribution, but Canadians are not represented and might well feel ashamed that they have not given one dollar towards the great cause."

MONUMENT HANDED OVER
The monument was formally handed over to the town by Mrs. G. C. McLean, Regent of the local Chapter and accepted by Councillor W. C. MacLaren who made a stirring patriotic address.

The sculptor Hamilton McCarthy of Ottawa and Judge McDonald also spoke briefly. Later the Minister and guests were entertained at tea by the Daughters at the Armory.
