DR. MICHAEL CLARKE, M.P. SPEAKS AT MONTREAL

Montreal, Jan. 21—Dr. Michael Clarke, the militant member for Red Deer, created a most favorable impression before the members of the Montreal Reform Club, where he was the guest of honor at a banquet on Saturday night.

In the course of a brilliant speech Dr. Clarke reviewed the late contest and the various issues raised, touched on the incapacity of the present Government, and ridiculed the alliance between the Nationalists and the Tory Orangemen of Ontario. He also dwelt at some length upon the history of Liberalism, and what it had achieved in Great Britain and in Canada. "Liberalism has been on the side of the people who were struggling for liberty and freedom," said Dr. Clarke, and proved his statement by relating the history of the parties in British politics.

PROBLEMS STILL UNSOLVED

Speaking of the last contest in Canada, Dr. Clarke said: "The nation took a retrograde step. We fought for lower taxation, increase of trade, and for the best possible commercial relations with our neighbors, but the country was swept by a wave of passion and prejudice. The Conservatives won by befogging the issue. They drew not one but a barrel of herring across the path. But, continued the speaker, 'the economic problems we fought for are still unsolved. The western farmers cannot find outlets for their grain, and this has made them see their mistake. There is not a western farmer who does not favor reciprocity today. Expansion is the watchword of the Liberals in trade matters, while contraction and restriction are the watchwords of the Conservatives,' was one of the statements.

"No Tory party can live long without being scared of something," was another of the speakers' witticisms, and another was that "like certain insects, the Nationalists had propagated a few Tories and then become extinct."

The speech was a stirring appeal to Liberals to stand by their leader any by their principles, not to be discouraged over their recent defeat, but to continue their fight for lower taxation, broader markets and all the other great principles of Liberalism.

THE NEW ALKIANCE

Dr. Clarke ridiculed the Nationalist-Conservative alliance, Montreal, he stated, had recently had an extraordinary star attraction in the appearance of Col. Sam Hughes and Mr. Monk at the same banquet table. "If," he declared, amid laughter and applause, "prior to September 21, the people of Quebec Province had been informed that within three months of the election, Hughes and Monk would be falling upon one another's necks in this city, I question if what was then the Nationalist-Tory combination would have achieved the limited electoral success which attended their efforts in this Province.

"If Nationalism stood for anything at all," proceeded the speaker, "it stood for anti-militarism, and with this attitude of the Nationalists I, for one, had considerable sympathy. If there be one high duty in the immediate destiny of the North American continent—Canada and the United States alike in this—it is to teach the nations of the world by precept and by example that verile peoples can subsist and flourish without cutting each other's throats.

"Do I need to prove that Nationalism pretended to stand for this, and appealed by this with some success to the pacific and humanitarian population of the Province of Quebec?" queried Dr. Clarke. Proceeding he quoted the resolution adopted at the Nationalist meeting: "We blame the Federal government and the majority in Parliament, who have imposed on Canada the new navy legislation, and thrown our country into the vortex of militarism." And further: "We censure as well the attitude of Mr. Borden and those of his followers who have urged the adoption of a no less nefarious policy." Quoting these utterances in Parliament Mr. Monk had said: "We deemed it necessary to enunciate this policy, and we have stood by it since on every occasion."

FUN WITH COL. SAM

"Where was Mr. Monk's anti-militarism at the Hughes and Monk banquet?" inquired Dr. Clarke amid renewed laughter. "There is nothing more exquisitely funny than the way in which the Honorable Samuel tackled and solved, so far as he is concerned, the chief difficulties of the Cabinet. Even their friends admit that the Nationalist alliance and their attitude on the navy have given the Cabinet some trouble. Not so the Minister of Militia. (Laughter) I can imagine that courageous, honest and outspoken gentleman, as he hauled Mr. Monk off to Montreal, saying to himself 'Leave the Nationalist alliance to me!' (Renewed laughter.) When the warrior got his lamb-like quarry amongst his merry men Nationalist anti-militarism speedily became a dissolving view. There was no standing at ease for the Minister of Public Works at that banquet. One can scarcely imagine he even sat at ease. The order was 'Attention!' and Mr. Monk meekly obeyed, while he heard the Minister of Militia unfold a scheme for turning Canada into an armed camp. The Ottawa Journal saw in this proceeding a foretaste of the millennium. I should have thought that with its million bulleseyes and its forty thousand youths in summer camps it was more like a preliminary to the battle of Armageddon. Of course the millennial incident the Ottawa scribe referred to was that of the lion and the lamb lying down together. But I never thought the millennium contemplated the lamb lying down inside the lion, for that is what happened on this occasion. The Minister of Militia swallowed the Nationalist party at one gulp. There was not a tuft of wool left not a bleat was heard. (Laughter) Naturalists tell us that some insects expire the moment they perpetuate their species. History will certainly say of the Quebec Nationalists that they begat a few Tories and became extinct. (Laughter.)

A LARGER NATIONALISM

Dr. Clarke appealed for a larger nationalism. "I would exhort you," he said, "to put no faith in the pseudo-nationalism of a disgruntled minority in your Province, and just as little in the pseudo-nationalist policy of the Tory party of the coalition. A truly national policy is that which builds a nation, and in the last fifteen years, our enemies themselves being judges, Liberalism has made those a people who were not a people.

"The Liberal party" declared Dr. Clarke, "is the truly nationalist party for in all its history it has set its face towards the prosperity and happiness and the upbuilding of the whole people, and towards the curbing of the self-seeking of sections, creeds or interests, however powerful. In Opposition as in power Canada's truly national statesman is to be found in the brilliant and distinguished Liberal leader, whose cheerfulness and courage in defeat have endeared him still more to the whole Canadian people, who, I firmly believe, will at the next time of asking place the country's destinies in his skillful and unequalled hands."
