TRIAL OF ALLEGED DYNAMITERS HAS BEGUN

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 1.—The opening today of the trial against the fifty-one present or former officials of labor unions, on the charge of complicity in the so-called "dynamiting conspiracy," attracted a large crowd of spectators to the courtroom of Judge Albert B. Anderson of the United States District Court. Long before the opening of the court every available seat in the court was occupied and the corridor of the Federal building was filled with people who could not find space in the courtroom.

During the preliminaries to the opening of the session general interest centred in United States Senator John W. Kern, chief counsel for the defendants and District Attorney Charles W. Miller and his assistant, Clarence Nichols, who represent the government in this trial. They were on hand promptly, apparently prepared for the fray. The fifty-one men facing trial occupied the places assigned to them. They did not seem to be worried and, before the court was formally opened, carried on an animated chat among themselves.

The defendants are indicated under a Federal statute forbidding the transportation of explosives on passenger trains and are charged with having been concerned in a nationwide plot to destroy the property of contractors employing non-union ironworkers, culminating in the explosion in the Los Angeles Times building, which cost twenty-one lives. In its report of February 6 last the grand jury indicted fifty-four men, but of this number John J. and James B. McNamara are in San Quentin prison, California, and J. J. McCray, a former member of the executive board of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, has not been found by the Federal authorities. Most of the defendants are or have been connected with the Ironworkers' Association, which since 1905, has been engaged in a struggle with the National Erectors' Association, an organization of structural steel and iron contractors employing non-union workmen. Members of this employers' association suffered loss from more than one hundred explosions from 1905 to 1911.

Following the arrest of John J. McNamara, secretary treasurer of the Ironworkers' Association, at its headquarters in this city, and the arrest of James B. McNamara and Ortis B. McManigal in Detroit, in connection with the Los Angeles Times explosion, presentations were made to the Federal grand jury of this district that officials of the Ironworkers' Association and other labor unions had been concerned in a conspiracy to intimidate employers of unorganized labor by a systematic destruction of their property.

Ortis McManigal's confession, in which he related that he had been employed by the McNamara brothers and Herbert S. Hockin, acting secretary treasurer of the Ironworkers' Association, to dynamite bridges and buildings in course of construction by non-union contractors, was the basis of the government's inquiry. McManigal has been brought here and is to be the principal witness for the government in this trial. A mass of letters and other records, seized in a raid on the offices of the Ironworkers' Association, also will be offered as evidence of a general conspiracy secretly to convey dynamite and nitroglycerine from coast to coast in a campaign against employers of unorganized ironworkers.

Most prominent among the defendants are Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers; Herbert S. Hockin, acting secretary treasurer and the alleged head of the "dynamiting crew," John T. Butler, of Buffalo, first vice-president, Michael J. Young of Boston, and Phillip A. Cooley, of New Orleans, members of the executive board; Claf A. Treimoe, secretary of the Building Trades Council of California; William K. Benson, former president of the Detroit Federation of Labor; Clarence E. Dowd, organizer for the International Association of Machinists and a number of minor officials of various other unions.

LORD MILNER

MEMORIES OF OXFORD.

Lord Milner proceeded to give some interesting reminiscences of Dr. Parkin in his Oxford days. One of these was of arguing in favor of imperial federation in the Oxford Union. That was thirty-six years ago. The present British prime minister, Henry Asquith, was in the chair. He himself had been a supporter of Dr. Parkin on that occasion. He could not recollect whether or not the Union had passed the resolution they had been supporting but he remembered that its members, although having but little knowledge of a subject then considered a matter of the distant future, were quite favorably impressed.

The speaker also mentioned another recollection of Dr. Parkin as an imperial federationist when by sheer force of argument and personality, he obtained a hearing from a hostile audience in London, composed largely of the working class—representatives of the Little England party, he would call them, who were strongly opposed to attention being given to other parts of the empire, a feeling that was growing less.

Dr. Parkin at the present time was not so militant in the cause of Imperial Federation as he had been in his younger days but nevertheless he believed he still had that cause near his heart. His Lordship referred to Dr. Parkin's work in connection with the Rhodes Trust which had a most important influence on the Imperial question. An institution which had produced a man of that class might well be proud. (Applause.)

THE SMALL UNIVERSITY

Dealing with the comparative value of the large and the small institutions of learning Viscount Milner referred to the fact until a few years ago England with thirty millions of people had but three universities. Lately new universities—very healthy and sturdy infants—had been established. In the Maritime Provinces with a million of people there were seven or eight. On behalf of the large universities it might be said that the aim of such an institution was to attract large bodies of students and thus achieve the purpose of the university. On the other hand to the small university fell the opportunity for the development of character.

Speaking particularly of the University of New Brunswick Lord Milner expressed the hope that it would receive from the government that support which it merited. (Applause.) It was also to be expected that private individuals of wealth who were becoming more numerous in Canada, would also contribute to the support of this among other similar institutions in the Dominion. (Applause.)

CANADIAN PACIFIC

IS SOFT TODAY

New York, Oct. 1.—The market opening was active and lower but stocks as a rule showed tendency to recover from their initial declines during the first few minutes. Decline was attributed to unsettlement of market from abroad although it is doubtful if that factor would have produced much effect had there not been considerable selling of stocks here in past few days. Opening on U. S. Steel was made by 8,000 shares at 79½ and 79.

UNHAPPY MONCTON.

Transcript:—What a peculiar situation exists in Moncton! The same malign influence which inspired one investigation and allowed it to bungle along to the greater injury of its friend than its opponent has also bungled along in the Kay investigation to a point where the moral conscience of Conservative as well as Liberal revolts.
