of words. Not only did one think in words but also reason in words. General terms were the words used largely in reasoning.

There was nothing in which one was more deceived than in the use of words. The world has been governed by words and by words largely misapplied and misconstrued. Everyone knew what a part party names such as "Whig" and "Tory" had played. Take the word "anti-burgher." He once had heard a very fine Highland gentleman resident in the county of Pictou say that "anti-burgher" was a term of reproach. He was utterly mistaken. The word dated from the "Forty-five" when to test their orthodoxy had to take the "burgher" oath. Some refused and were called "anti-burghers."

FOSSILIZED POEMS

Dean French had written a very fine book on words. An American writer had termed a word a "fossilized poem." All had heard of "sermons in stones." Some stones told long sermons and so it was with words.

Dean French goes on to mention a number of words. Take "delapidated." That meant really a building from which the stones had been thrown down, so one could see what the American meant by a "fossilized poem." "Tribulation" meant something pertaining to the separation of wheat from chaff. "Revelation" meant "drawing back of the veil." By what He had given us God had given man the power to see what otherwise he could not see.

MEANING OF BIBLE

Again take the word "Bible." It meant "the books" being derived from the plural word "biblia." The Jews took unprecedented and extraordinary precautions to preserve the "books" which they called "the Law the Prophets and the Psalms." Nowadays there were many books, novels for the most part he feared, and the true "Book" was apt to be neglected.

WORDS AND CHURCH GOVERNMENT

"Bishop" is merely a form of "episcopos." John Knox was not opposed to episcopacy. He termed it lawful but not expedient. Knox translated the word "episcopos" to mean "superintendent" and the easily reformed Scottish Church had officials which it afterwards lost, superintendents who were over districts which corresponded to the old dioceses.

But the word "episcopos" acquired a new meaning. It came to mean one with powers of ordination and that was not what Knox intended. James I. of England bitterly hated the "Presbyter" and when the Bible was translated under his direction and the introduction to it was written the word "bishops" used as the translation of "episcopos" as King James wished to alter the form of church government. "Presbyter" was a word also with a meaning which had changed about the same time.

OTHER WORDS

Dr. Pollock proceeded to other words. "Apostle" he said meant "messenger." It had nothing to do with government. The Lord's apostles were sent out as actual "witnesses" and consequently there could be no such thing as "apostolic succession" as all the apostles were dead at the end of the first century.

When it was necessary to send a cultivated messenger to spread the gospel among the highly cultivated Greek nation Paul was sent and to make him an apostle God Himself came down from Heaven.

WHAT CATHOLIC REALLY MEANS

The word "Catholic" was a word of varying meaning. It was used in the "Apostle's Creed," a most beautiful creed which was peculiarly the creed of the west and unlike the Nicene creed. There was no objection to the word "Catholic" used as it is in that creed and Protestants had a right to it although the Roman Catholic body had rather confined its use to itself.

NOT A DRY SUBJECT.

"The study of a dictionary," said Dr. Pollock "is by no means dry but one of great importance and containing much logical exercise."

The speaker then dealt with the abuse of words. There should be no objection to the doctrine of "election" which means simply the choice of a member from among others. Its contrary was "non-election" and not "reprobation."

Dr. Pollock then discussed the word "righteousness," which he defined as conformity to the moral law. It belonged only to those who accepted God. No one should be scandalized at the importance attached to the word "faith." Everyone made use "faith" in every-day life.

His subject, said Dr. Pollock in conclusion, had been dry but nevertheless was one of importance. Words should be looked into carefully by all Preachers should pay particular attention to all terms used.

He was delighted to know of the prosperity of St. Paul's congregation.

tion. He was not surprised as he knew Dr. Smith. It was not possible for him to neglect anything or any person. (Applause.)

VOTE OF THANKS.

Mr. O. S. Crockett, M.P., moving a vote of thanks to Dr. Pollock, congratulated the latter upon the excellence of his address and expressed the hope that he long would be spared.

Dr. W. C. Kierstead seconded the motion. The subject was one of interest, particularly to those who had given the matter prior thought. To those who had had the privilege of passing through the class-rooms of the distinguished teacher his remarks had significance they perhaps did not have to others. He had pointed out the logical, the psychological and almost hypnotic influence which words had. In the value of theology he had shown the fundamental value of words and also the value of conviction.

The vote of thanks was formally offered by President Hall.

Replying, Dr. Pollock said, amid laughter, that had he believed all the good things said of him this week and last he would be a moral wreck and fit for nothing.

Short addresses were made by Rev. Neil McLaughlin, pastor of the Methodist church; Rev. J. E. Wilson, pastor of the George Street Baptist church; Chancellor Jones of the U. N.B., and Judge Wilson, all of whom paid tribute to the ability of Rev. Dr. Pollock and expressed the wish that he would long be spared to the church in which he had labored for so many years.

STOCK MARKET

New York, Nov. 14—Although stocks were supplied at the opening the selling was absorbed without difficulty. Had traders been in a position to help along an upward movement the market might have advanced vigorously but the fact that those operations were committed to the Bear Side and hesitated about covering shorts tended to keep them from obtaining great headway. The peace talk which helped foreign markets naturally had some influence here but it was partly counteracted by advances in Berlin bank rate which seemed to preclude the possibility of gold imports in near future. Amal Copper was a strong feature responding to the advance to the price of the metal in London, but Smelter was so heavy that traders said there must be something hanging over that stock.
