STRAY TOPICS FROM NEW YORK.

New York, July 18—As usual after the closing of the schools the vacations of which this city has more than one hundred have been opened and daily they are thronged with thousands of those poor children who are not so fortunate as to be able to spend the summer months in the country. Last summer these playgrounds had a total attendance of 3,322,516 children and it is expected that this year the attendance will be far in excess of that figure. Many of these playgrounds are equipped with shower baths which are thoroughly enjoyed by the youngsters.

There are also morning and afternoon playgrounds for mothers with babies and roof playgrounds which last year were patronized by an aggregate of more than two millions women and children. These playgrounds are scattered over the whole city and are in many cases connected with public school buildings. They are a great boon to the many thousands of children in the congested districts of the city who are compelled to remain in the city during the vacation months and are even too poor to make trips to the woods and large natural parks in the immediate vicinity of the city.

Some of the suffrage agitators trying to make converts in the densely populated sections of the East and West side here given a taste of their own medicine the other day and—as was to be expected—did not enjoy the experience. They were bombarded with over-ripe hen-fruits, garbage and bags filled with dirty water and afterward made indignant complaints to the police department because they had not been given adequate police department because they had not been given adequate protection. It is rather odd that one of the speakers was an English suffragette who had taken part in the window-smashing riots in London.

FLORENCE FAIRBANKS ON FADS AND FASHIONS

New York, July 20—White serge is always a feature of the seashore wardrobe and while each season brings out admirable models in this material, this summer's showing is more than usually attractive. In Paris during the gay season white serge has been seen in many old phases. The famous makers have for instance combined the wool material with the finest linen letting the cool lingerie material form the upper part of the bodice and sleeves and perhaps a plaited or flounced or embroidered skirt or petticoat under a tunic of the serge. This is never than the combination of serge and tulle or serge and chiffon; and while there may be two opinions as to the success of the combination it has been accepted in Paris as indubitably chic. However, it is the simpler tailored coat and semi-tailored frock that white serge is at its best and is most useful.

The white serge tailored suit has a wide range in point of elaboration but for general use the more severe models are the most effective. A perfectly plain, beautifully tailored coat cutaway and running into long tails at the back made with long coat sleeves and a mannish collar or shawl collar rather deep and clinging on the shoulders and associated with a plain skirt not too narrow, the whole untrimmed except for white pearl buttons and a binding of white silk braid on all the edges has an extraordinary amount of style if worn by a woman with good figure.

STRAIGHT COAT MODELS

Some of the straight coat models in white serge are good too and when successful in line and detail are preferable now to the over popular short cutaway which has been developed in a multitude of cheap ready-made models. An uncommonly good looking straight coat suit in white serge had effective details in its line of flat stitched tabs fastening both coat and skirt down the front each tab having a buttonhole with a white pearl button, and in its old pocket-like motifs set on the coat sides and holding down a belt which does not affect the straight line of the coat.

The elaborately braided white serge suits and those with which white satin or other silk is liberally combined have less smartness than such original but strictly tailored models as the one just described; but good results are often obtained by introducing a note of vivid color in belt, buttons or collar. Poiré likes this touch of color in the form of foilé de Jouy or the more crude and daring figured linen that is known as toile de Vichy. This latter material combined primitive and startling colors in a design almost as primitive, yet it does have a certain likeable effect when skilfully used and the French makers are making entire coat linings of it, facing collars and cuffs, etc. It is rather more successful in the coat than in suit or frock, but with white serge it sometimes gives a pleasing effect. However, the mild or Jouy colorings and designs are usually safer propositions even with white serge and of these are made piquant little waistcoats, collar facings and the like. Sometimes the waistcoat is the only detail in which the gay flowered stuff is used and it shows but little.

BOLERO.

The bolero, which has not yet reassured itself very insistently on this side of the water, is increasingly popular abroad and some of the prettiest imported models of costume in white serge which have come over recently, have loose little boleros whose points roll back softly in front to show a facing in white crepe or in color, and often to display a short, fanciful little waistcoat of flowered stuff or white silk. Sometimes the bolero has no waistcoat, but between its open fronts forms a cascade of soft lace or fine lingerie and lace above a deep sash girdle.

NORFOLK SUIT.

The white serge Norfolk suit is very smart for informal outing wear but is made more often in the roughest serges and loose woven white woollens than in fine serges. Such a white costume, with or without a silk-lined hood and worn with a mannish skirt of soft, heavy white wash silk, is a very knowing costume for the yacht or for any seashore outing wear and a one-piece frock of white serge with a long cover-all coat of the same serge, loose, ample, yet without loose ends and folds to flap in the wind, is a good item for the yachting outfit.

The belt of black patent leather trimmed in pates of plain color or figured material and in little buttons is worn with the white serge suit or frock, as with almost any day time frock to sheer muslin, and much ingenuity is displayed in the trimming of these belts, that is in the introduction of the trimming color and material. One may find in the shops such belts with almost any of the plain gay relieving colors and one may too find the belts of black or black and white and separate trimming motifs in color, to be applied according to one's taste. The exclusive tailors and dressmakers have belts made or trimmed according to their own ideas, in order to be sure of original effects harmonizing perfectly with the general plan of the suit or frock.

DRESDEN SILKS

With the revival of the pannier draperies comes back a decided emphasis on Dresden silks with all the exquisite colorings that we associate with the Dresden shepherdesses. Pink and blues, yellows and pale green are the back grounds on which are sprinkled fascinating bouquets, garlands and even baskets of flowers. The Dresden silks and satins are particularly adapted to suit the coaters that are incorporated on afternoon and evening frocks for summer wear. They are not so striking in contrast with a plain, thin fabric and there is great scope for color combinations and flower effects. Hats covered with Dresden tulle are decidedly chic and bridesmaids now are favoring hats of this type. Little Dresden silk shippers for the rest hour add a new touch to the negligé set, especially if binding or trimming of Dresden silk be used on the gown. Dresden sashes are also very attractive and add an artistic touch too and otherwise plain costume.

THE BARONY.

The Barony, July 17—Mrs. Robert Anderson and family have returned to their home in St. Stephen after spending some weeks with relatives here.

Mrs. G. W. Ebbett is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Gerow, at Meductic.

Miss Fannie Pickard is spending a few days with her brother at Millville.

Miss Annie Lockhard is taking her vacation in Prince William, the guest of her grandmother, Mrs. Wm. Fraser.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee and Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Davidson spent a day here on a fishing trip. They came by auto and while here were the guests of Mr. Davidson's brother, Mr. Samuel Davidson.

Mrs. Fred Ebbett is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. C. Davison, at Woodstock.

Mr. Wheaton, contractor for this section of the Valley Railway, entertained an auto party of relatives from Toronto and St. John at Mr. Anderson's during the week-end.

Misses Deb. Ebbett and Nellie Kirkpatrick spent an afternoon last week with Miss Gladys Folster.

The Misses Kirk have added greatly to the appearance of their buildings by having a new barn erected. Messrs. Simmons of Allandale, were the builders.

Rev. Wm. and Mrs. Girdwood were recently calling on friends in this place.

The Misses Ebbett were the guests of their cousin, Mrs. Albert Gough, at Caverhill last Tuesday.

The death occurred recently of an aged and most highly respected citizen, Mr. John Fauch, who had been confined to his bed for the past three weeks. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. A. Rutledge and was largely attended by the many friends of the deceased.

On Monday Miss Deb Ebbett gave a lawn party in honor of her cousin, Miss Nellie Kirkpatrick of Fredericton, who is visiting her during her vacation.

Had Boils On Neck and Arms.

Had Them Lanced But Got No Relief Until He Used Burdock Blood Bitters.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still, at the same time are very painful. They are caused entirely by bad blood, and for you to get rid of them it is absolutely necessary to put the blood into good condition. For this purpose there is no remedy that can compare with Burdock Blood Bitters. This preparation has been on the market for about 35 years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other for the making of pure, rich, red blood. Mr. H. J. Batten, Stratford, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled for several weeks with boils on my neck and arms. I had them lanced by the doctor, but as soon as one went others came. I tried all kinds of so called remedies, but could get no relief till I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I am pleased to say I am now quite free from those most painful things, and feel much better in every respect."

My boy, of nine years, had a rash come over his back and legs, so we gave him a few doses and now he is all right again."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
