NO EMERGENCY EXISTS

There is a merry war on between Mr. C. H. Cahan, a Montreal financier and ex-Tory editor, and The Montreal Star over the naval question. Although the newspapers of Britain have practically dropped the German "scare" as an effective partisan spectre, yet the Montreal paper continues to exploit the somewhat attenuated ghost and to shout, "it is here! it is here!" but without much effect. The Star seems to be of the opinion that the only way to get Premier Borden and his administration to do anything at all is by frightening them and giving "creeps" to the electorate. Mr. C. H. Cahan, past and present a Tory of the Tories, in opposition to The Star, set forth the contention that there is no emergency, no desperate crisis, that the "scare" was artificially worked up for political purposes, and that an emergency contribution is unnecessary and objectionable. To show that no "emergency" exists, he quoted Premier Asquith and Sir Edward Grey to the effect that the relations of Germany and England are excellent, and quoted Hon. Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, and Lord Crewe to the effect that Britain's present and prospective shipbuilding program was such as to make her now and for a long time more than a match for all the other nations of Europe put together in Dreadnoughts and more than double the strength of any single antagonist in other naval types, cruisers, destroyers, submarines, etc.

To this contention on the part of Mr. Cahan, The Star replied by saying that Mr. Cahan must be an innocent verandcy indeed to accept the statements of such men in authority as safe or authoritative; that they were speaking "diplomatically," defending their own position against criticism and using the usual "correct" language of diplomacy in order not to offend the susceptibilities of foreign powers. It was intimated that Mr. Cahan was politician enough to distinguish between a statesman's official utterances and his private opinions, and claimed that facts speak louder than words. It was in vain that Mr. Cahan had pointed out that the British opposition leaders had not attacked the government on the naval question or called into question the official statements of the ministers; The Star knew better than either the ministers or the opposition leaders.

In reply to The Star's reply, Mr. Cahan sarcastically observed that it was a very easy and expeditious way of answering an opponent by stating that he himself was glib and the authorities quoted were liars—or rather diplomats' purely; that the prime minister, that the first lord of the admiralty, that Sir Edward Grey, that Lord Crew, Lord Brassey, Admiral Fisher and all the rest of them had entered into a conspiracy to chloroform the people by words of false assurances in order to lull them into a dangerous sense of security until a fatal blow was struck and Britain lay bleeding beneath the iron heel of the Teuton. In other words, Mr. Cahan accused The Star of not only calling the rulers of Britain liars, but as looking upon them as traitors prepared to deliver their country up to destruction.

"When The Star devotes its admittedly great abilities to effect the destruction of British prestige throughout the world by portraying in lurid colors the alleged weakness and inefficiency of British naval power, and the irresponsibility and Machiavellian mendacity of representative British statesmen, I imagine that there are at least a few of its readers who will vigorously endorse my note of earnest protest."

So says Mr. Cahan. In another letter Mr. Cahan gets back at The Star in this fashion:

"With one set of British politicians inciting Ulster to insurrection, and another set flagrantly falsifying the facts as to our international relationships and national security, it is apparently high time for Canadians to reconsider their political relations with a view to determining whether it is expedient that Canada should continue to be linked up with such unprincipled politicians as The Star now frankly represents British statesmen to be."

At this distance it looks as if Mr. Cahan had largely the best of the argument. Being a good Tory he is not open to the charge of disloyalty.

The meeting of the Board of Trade last evening, called to discuss the application of the St. John & Quebec Railway Company for running rights over the C.P.R. tracks in this city, was a complete fiasco. The meeting was not largely attended, but what it lacked in numbers it more than made up in dignity. In fact, almost every member present climbed on to his high horse and it was found impossible to get them down to a level where they could take up the business for which the meeting was called. The city clerk, who seems to enjoy immunity from the ailment known as swelled head, finally moved that the gathering disperse. The resolution carried and the members hastily sought the open air. If our Board of Trade wants to be regarded as an agency for good in the community the members should refrain from employing school boy tactics in public.

Hon. Mr. Monk has tendered his resignation to the governor general and according to The Ottawa correspondent of The Standard, "this will close the incident." Will it close the incident? We should say not. Mr. Borden's troubles are only beginning.

Toronto Globe:—The Hon. L. P. Pelletier stays with the loaves and fishes. As Hosea Biglow—slightly varied—puts it: "A merciful Providence made him hollow on purpose that he might his principles swallow."

HIGH SCHOOL STILL LEADS IN VOTING CONTEST

High School still leads in the voting contest but is closely pressed by the Algonquin Club. A new competitor appears in the list this week in the name of the Reformed Baptist Church. The latter, notwithstanding their late start, are in fourth place. Others which polled big votes this week were the George Street Baptist Church, the Parish Church Lending Library and the Normal School.

The standing is as follows:—

CONTRASTS.

How soft the lamplight falls

On pictures, books,

And pleasant-covered walls

And curtains drawn!

How happily one looks

On glowing flame and ember;

Ah, why should one remember

Dew and the dawn!

Here Age and Wisdom sit,

Calm and discreet,

Life and the fruit of it

And bore in truth;

But once new wine was sweet,

Wisdom and Age! well-met!

Yet neither can forget

Folly and youth!

—E. Nesbit.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS WEAKNESS

New York, Oct. 22.—After a moderate rally the market turned dull. Traders were bearish but although they asserted that the advance would go no further, they showed no disposition to increase their commitments on the short side. C. P. R. showed considerable strength, considering weakness of foreign markets. It opened at 253, a decline of 3, but soon recovered to 264. This seemed to indicate that Foreign liquidation was about over. St. John in Mexico Petroleum was regarded as an indication that large interests in the company expect the success of the Diaz revolutionary movement and the early establishment of a stable government in Mexico.

Long dress sleeves are fashionable. When made of chiffon, they are usually snipped into cuffs. When made of brocade, of satin, or of velvet, they are very tight and shapely and frequently are bordered with fur. Some sleeves show fullness above the elbow in the shape of shirred or plaited puffs. Many dress sleeves are still made with a combination of two materials. The lower part is of lace or chiffon, which is pulled into a long shoulder of cloth or silk, and gathered to the hand by a narrow band, below which hangs a frill of the net. Others, made in this same combination of net and cloth, are long and fitted tightly to the arm. The lace under portion runs up in a deep point above the elbow over the cloth part of the sleeve. Usually this style of sleeve is developed in dark cloth with some bright touch of color in the form of printed velvet, brocade, chiffon or lace.
