SMUTS DOING GOOD WORK FOR THE BRITISH EMPIRE

Premier of the Union of South Africa an Outstanding Figure —His Recent Victory at the Polls a Triumph for Those Desiring the Maintenance of British Connection — Held a High Place During the War.

"I am here today as Prime Minister of South Africa on an equal footing with Lloyd George."

This is one of the most significant of many momentous declarations by Premier Smuts during the recent South African election campaign. It was made in an electoral address at Magaliesburg on Dec. 16, 1920.

Premier Smuts' triumph is rightly hailed as a victory for those desiring the maintenance of the British commonwealth. His chief opponent, Hertzog favored an independent republic for South Africa. Smuts favored continued British affiliation.

But it is not the old idea of a British Empire that Smuts favored, and his victory is even more significant on its positive than on its negative side.

Without much friction, Smuts' policy brings the new day nearer for he is in the position of combating a republican separatist movement at the same time that he is advancing a constitutional nationalism.

Smuts, in this campaign, has added to a reputation that was already unusual. There were many observers in Great Britain during the period 1917-1919 who were convinced and who did not hesitate to say that Smuts was an able man than Lloyd George.

Without making invidious comparisons, however it can easily be said that Smuts and Lloyd George were the two ablest men conducting the war for Britain and the Dominions. Smuts was the only man coming from the outside who was a member of the "war cabinet."

During the frequent visits of Dominion Prime Ministers and their colleagues, they become members of the "Imperial War Cabinet" which discussed and acted upon war matters affecting the whole Empire. But these Prime Ministers came and went.

Smuts was not the Prime Minister of South Africa at the time, but he came over to represent the Prime Minister Botha, at the Imperial Conference of 1917. He remained in Great Britain and, despite all constitutional barriers became a member of the War Cabinet of Great Britain, that body of five men who ruled Britain in war time.

There were scattered objections from constitutionalists that a British Cabinet Minister must be a member of the British parliament. This was admitted, but Smuts continued to be a member of the British Cabinet for at least a year, if not longer, although he was not a member of Parliament.

The point is that whether this constitutional anomaly was justified or not, Britain needed Smuts' aid so much that it simply couldn't be dispensed with, rules or no rules.

It wasn't only during the war that Smuts held so pre-eminent a place. At the Versailles Peace Conference he was a dominating figure, again sharing the canvas with Lloyd George.

But whereas the latter, publicly, at any rate signed the Peace Treaty at Versailles without reservations, Smuts signed it only with written and public reservations, criticizing the spirit in which it was framed and also specifically the economic clauses of the treaty.

Without entering into the controversy as to the morality or the expediency of the Treaty of Versailles one must admit Smuts' prescience in anticipating the criticism which has poured out against the treaty ever since its signature.

When you speak of Smuts therefore you are speaking of a giant. When that giant turns his attention to Dominion affairs, outstanding developments are inevitable.

It will be sufficient here merely to mention some of the details in the platform on which Smuts has been re-elected Prime Minister of South Africa.

Not only does he declare his equality with the Prime Minister of Great Britain, but in his Pretoria speech during the campaign as well as elsewhere he declared that the old Empire ceased to exist as a result of the war, and that no longer would there be central supremacy in subordinate Dominions.

In this Pretoria speech, he also declared that South Africa would have power and authority, not only with respect to domestic questions but also over international and foreign relations.

South Africa, he declared, can be also involved in war only by the action of the South African Government and Parliament, and they alone can make peace for South Africa.

"We are out for a sovereign status," he declared. "We are opposed to closer union either in the shape of Imperial Federation with legislative powers or an Imperial Council with executive power."

South Africa, according to Smuts, will be an independent sovereign state in friendly association with the British Empire. It will favor the development of the periodic conference system between the various Governments of the Commonwealth.

In the South African Parliament, Smuts has declared that his country will have her own flag.

Already under its constitution of 1909 South Africa has the power to confine appeals to South African courts except in admiralty cases which are usually international in character.

South Africa has also the right to amend its own constitution.

THE INFLUENCE OF ADVERTISING ON THE PUBLIC MIND

HOW MANY PEOPLE know the names of the highest mountain peaks in the world?

FOR INSTANCE, "Kinchinjanga" is the name of one of the highest mountains in the world. It is 28,156 feet high.

PIKE'S PEAK is only 14,108 feet high—but it gets credit for being higher because it is advertised.

ADVERTISING will bring many unknown things into prominence during the coming years.

NOW IS THE TIME, when so many articles and commodities of trade are flooding already overstocked markets, for the man with goods to sell to let the people know all about it.

THE BEST WAY to let the people know is to advertise in the newspapers.

YOU HAVE SEEN THIS in the Daily Mail—let the public know what you have to sell through the advertising resources of this newspaper.
