CANADIAN PARLIAMENT OPENED IN NEW SENATE THIS AFTERNOON

Likely the Last Session of the Present Parliament—Opened
With Pomp and Display of Pre-War Times—Not an Extensive Programme Outlined.

OTTAWA, Feb. 14.—What will in all probability be the last Session of the present Federal Parliament was formally opened this afternoon by His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire. The ceremony took place in the new Senate Chamber and was marked by all the pomp and splendor of pre-war days. The guard of honor was furnished by the Governor General's Foot Guards and the customary salute was fired by a detachment from the Royal Canadian Artillery.

The Speech from the Throne, which was read by His Excellency, does not outline a very extensive programme, but the session promises to be an important one. After the usual formalities in the Commons chamber, the House will adjourn until tomorrow, when the debate on the address will begin. Mr. James McIsaac of Kings, P. E. I., will be the mover and Mr. J. A. McKelvie, of Yale, B. C., will be the seconder. They will be followed by Hon. Mackenzie King, leader of the opposition, who is expected to move an amendment calling for a general election.

CANADIAN COUNCIL OF AGRICULTURE TAKES HAND IN WESTERN POLITICS

Regina, Sask., Feb. 12.—The course which the farmers' political action in the Federal field will take will probably be definitely determined upon at the annual meeting of the Canadian Council of Agriculture to be held in Regina on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

While the Canadian Council of Agriculture does not dictate to the provincial organizations what policies shall be pursued, its recommendations carry great weight. This is instanced in the fact that the Council's decision at its last meeting to appoint T. A. Crerar as official leader of the agrarian movement, has been unanimously adopted by Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta conventions.

The day preceding the annual convention will be given to further consideration of an interprovincial wheat marketing pool on a voluntary co-operative basis by the special committee which promulgated the draft contract which provided so much discussion at the recent provincial conventions.

MRS. CARUSO'S CHEF WON OUT IN LAWSUIT

New York, Feb. 14.—A verdict of $770 was awarded Carlo Ragazzino for two weeks last summer cook in the Southampton home of Enrico Caruso, in the municipal court in the suit he brought against Mrs. Caruso because Mrs. Caruso had discharged him. The principal witnesses were Ragazzino, Mrs. Caruso and Bruno Zirate, the singers' secretary.

Mrs. Caruso, who discharged Ragazzino, testified that he had served the family half-cooked asparagus, brains that were not good and veal almost every day, and also that he had prepared half-cooked cereal for the children of her sister. Judge Eder, however, held that her testimony in this particular was hearsay and that the persons who could have testified regarding it from knowledge were not produced in court. He held that the testimony regarding the asparagus, brains and veal was proper, but he said there was no testimony to show that the brains were badly prepared by the cook or that he had purchased them. He held therefore that Mrs. Caruso did not have sufficient reason to discharge Ragazzino.

In a letter of Mr. Zirate, written after his discharge, the chef referred to Mrs. Caruso's sister as being "too fastidious" and declared that she had demanded special service for her children.

FEBRUARY

Around, above the world of snow
The light-heeled breezes breathe and blow;

Now here, now there, they whirl the flakes,
And whistle through the sun-dried brakes,
Then, growing faint in slence fall
Against the keyhole in the hall.

Then dusky twilight spreads around,
The last soft snowflake seeks the ground,
And through unshaded window-panes,
The lamp-rays strike across the plains

While now and then a shadow tall
Is thrown upon the whitewashed wall.

The hoar-frost crackles on the trees,
The rattling brook begins to freeze,
The well-sweep glistens in the light
As if with dust of diamonds bright;
And speeding o'er the crusted snow
A few swift-footed rabbits go.

N. Y. Herald. A national legislator recently said in a speech: "There was a time when the cherry was a necessity. Floating over the top of an old-fashioned cocktail it was both soothing and inviting." Powerful liquor! In these parts the cherry, we are informed, invariably sank to the bottom of the glass.

SAYS MIXED MARRIAGES ARE LEGAL

London, Feb. 14.—The Despatch-Tremblay decision, rendered by the Privy Council recently means that mixed marriages are valid by law, although the clergy are not compelled to perform them. Roman Catholic cures and Protestant clergymen have equal rights to solemnize marriages, but in all cases they must be preceded by banns or licenses.

There are no restrictions as to the religious faith of the persons to be married. All annulment grounds other than consanguinity, are considered, but the contract is binding if performed with legal formalities.

The most interesting points of the judgment were the emphasis laid on the non-interference of law in religious matters under British rule, and the refusal to consider law as existing before 1760, when Canada was a Roman Catholic country and Protestant marriages were invalid.

There are no provisions in the code to contest marriages so solemnized with legal formalities. In view of the fact that the parties have remarried, the judge made no order as to costs, which will be divided between husband and wife.

LOVERS

When Stella smiles and laughs with glee,
And snuggles close beside,
Then gives her tiny fist to me
My heart beats at high tide.

For Stella's tender, coy and three,
and lthps whenever she talks,
A fairy, mite and dear is she,
To guide me in my walks.

I hear her knocking at my door.
"Come in, you elf," I say.
Her pattering footsteps on the floor
Make music all the day.
