Advertising is News

WITHOUT ADVERTISEMENTS this paper would not be as interesting to you, because the information about goods for sale in the stores is news—just that.

Many people read newspapers as much for their advertising columns as they do for other news.

This is particularly true at this time of the year.

Stores are now advertising Spring Wearing Apparel and a host of things that are bought for household use, incident to spring cleaning.

Think of the money that will be spent by women for spring clothing. The new frocks, hats, shoes, lingerie, corsets, gloves, sweaters, neckwear, light wraps and blouses that will be bought.

The same is true of men's buying. Think of the suits, light top coats, hats, shirts, collars, ties, gloves, socks, shoes—the sporting goods and the incidental wearing apparel bought for golf, tennis and so on.

Think of the new things that will be bought for spring cleaning and home convenience at this time. The vacuum cleaners, carpet sweepers, brooms, gas and electric heaters, ranges, washing machines, paints, varnishes, floor wax, cleansing fluids, curtains, upholstery, garden and porch furniture, lawn mowers, garden tools, etc.

Think of the lighter foods coming into use. Cereals, fruits, salads.

All these new demands are incident to the changing season, and they all are Trade Stimulating.

People feel livelier at this time and consequently loosen up their purse strings.

The opportunity for local merchants to get over effective Local Advertising News at this time is so evident that it needs no emphasis.

MR. GARDNER'S MAJORITY
WILL BE UPWARDS OF 8,000

The capital was well nigh deserted by ministers and politicians to-day, but such as are about take a gloomy view of the prospect, and murmur about the Liberals and Labor supporting the farmer. Labor is denounced as of "red" proclivities.

What is especially significant apart from the overwhelming nature of the majority is the victory for Gardiner in the city of Medicine Hat. It is the supposed headquarters of the manufacturing interests of the west. The former mayor of the city has been here in recent sessions, emphasizing its great industrial potentialities, and in addresses at an exclusive series of propaganda dinners has pictured the upbuilding of a manufacturing industry out there with the effect of neutralizing the low tariff sentiment. Medicine Hat city was thus regarded as a crucial test and the fact that it has been carried by a large majority by the Progressive completely arrests this ambitious and generating political pain. It is the one feature of the by-election perhaps embodying the sordest touch apart from the fiasco of the grain inquiry as a disintegrating political factor among the farmers.

The political horoscope is very uncertain. On the night of the prorogation of parliament the prime minister bade his followers prepare for a general election, not that he forecasted it as a certainty, but as quite probable. Old heads counselled against such a course and professed to scent a more favorable sentiment towards the government in the country. If Medicine Hat be accepted as a sample the forecast proves most illusory. The government's plan is to hold on to the last, and in that it has the support of the rank and file. If, however, the bulk of the by-elections should go against the party its majority would be reduced to near a perilous dozen, and few believe that such conditions endurance could be continued. Mr. Meighen will have lots of advice when he comes back, one suggestion being to go to the country right away on the acquired prestige of the Imperial Conference. Such a course would meet with bitter opposition, but if the by-elections are all adverse dissolution can hardly be avoided, though in no sense is it an alluring prospect for the government.

Enormous Majority.

Medicine Hat, Alta., June 28.—Returns from the rural polls throughout the Medicine constituency are very slow in coming to hand and it will be some time next week before the final result can be ascertained. This afternoon the majority of Robert Gardiner, Farmer candidate, stood at 6,258, with 41 pools to hear from, and this may eventually be increased by several thousand more.

FIRM BELIEVERS IN COLD WATER REMEDY

Ever take a wet pack? No, it isn't anything to drink, or to eat with a spoon. It's a clammy form of solitary confinement, and it constitutes an all important item in an old fashioned domestic "water cure" on which more than a few healthy New Yorkers were brought up from the cradle.

"When I read of Dr. Simon Baruch's death," said one of these New Yorkers, "and of all he had accomplished in the direction of making people healthier and happier by soaking and splashing 'em in various ways according to the principles of hydrotherapy, how my memory flew back to boyhood's golden days and my mother's wet packs!"

"My mother was a strong minded woman. She didn't believe in medicine. She brought up a large and vigorous family, some members of which attained distinction in later life, on wet packs for all ailments. No drug ever puckered our mouths, no doctor darkened our doors.

"She pinned her faith in what was then called hydrotherapy. That was in the days before hydrotherapy had become respectable. When it became respectable it was called hydrotherapy. Official medicine had turned its nose up at hydrotherapy, but it took hydrotherapy under its wing, largely owing to the labors of Dr. Baruch and a few eminent physicians in Europe who perceived that the despised 'water cure' was not without a certain thought, as Carlyle might have said.

"I didn't worry my mother that the water cure hadn't been accepted by official medicine. She rather enjoyed being at war with the medical profession, and all her children grew up with a sort of Roman citizen feeling of superiority to the surrounding barbarians who sullied their interior works with pills and raughts. We got all that was coming to us in the way of measles, mumps, scarlet fever, scarlatina and so on, but my mother pulled us triumphantly through all pathological crises by means of her wet packs.

"The victim of the wet pack was stripped to a state of nature and rolled up like a mummy in a sheet that had been dipped into medium cold water and then wrung out. Then, looking something like the chrysalis of a moth, he was wrapped in roll after roll of blankets. His head was left out of course. His feet were care fully tucked in after the insertion of a hot brick to keep them company. Of course the hot brick had its own covering.

"In the wet pack of utmost severity the victim's two arms were at his sides, imprisoned by the clinging folds of the wet sheet enforced by the superincumbent weight of blankets, and he could not scratch his nose. But my mother was a merciful woman, and she packed her victims with one elbow bent and the hand nestling near the neck in a state of semi-freedom, so that with a little trouble one could extrude the fingers far enough to stroke some ticklish spot on the face—and how ticklish it becomes during the ritual of the wet pack!

"If somebody would give me a wet pack now I believe I'd enjoy it as well as saving doctor's bills, but in my childhood the wet pack was a purgatory. It generally lasted a couple of hours, and they seemed like a couple of days. My mother was never far away, and she'd drop in every little while to give the victim a drink and a kiss and to tell him to be patient and not to let the air in at his neck, because the longer it took him to break out in a perspiration the longer he'd have to stay in the pack.

"At last the perspiration would arrive, and then the pack would be worse than ever—phew! The victim, with trickling face and steaming body, tormented by a hundred little rills rolling off him here and there, would beg for immediate release, but he had to wait until my mother judged that he had sweated enough for his health, which might be five or ten minutes. And then—ah! the joy of being unpacked and popped into a heavenly tepid sponge bath, and eventually, if the pack had done its work well, allowed to dress and go out to play in the garden!"
