 She: What did you think of the minister's expression of the belief that the world would soon come to an end?
 He: I was rather inclined to think it would before he got through with his sermon.
Better Castles Than Caverns.
 I find the gayest castles in the air that were ever piled far better for comfort and for use than the dungeons in the air that are daily dug and caverned out by grumbling, discontented people.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Bank Notes Made of Silk.
 It is possible that before long all bank notes will be printed, not on paper, but on silk of a particular shade. It is by means of photography that most clever bank note forgeries are effected. A company held a private demonstration recently when Mrs. Ernest Hart explained a new process which she has invented for waterproofing fabrics without rubber and dyeing them in the same operation. By utilizing this process linen, cotton, or other material can be put into one end of a machine which and brought out a few minutes later colored, waterproofed, and dry! Each machine treats 480 yards in a day, and the materials produced are useful in hundreds of trades, from building aeroplanes to bank note making. As regards the latter, the material produced is of such a color that it cannot be photographed.

Moszkowski's Wit.

"Moritz Moszkowski is not only a great pianist," says the Paris Mene-strel, "but a clever wit." Among the things which the writer then relates to prove the assertion are these: "They say that the greater part of modern music is good, but that it sounds badly. I can subscribe to only half of the paradox." "Rubinstein once said 'the false notes which I struck in the course of six recent concerts were sufficient for a seventh.' Rubinstein is dead, but that seventh concert is still with us."

'Fish Walk' Tea.

The "Fish Walk" tea is the latest fad of the smart set, the Duchess of Manchester being responsible for its introduction to London society. There is no denying that the dance has "caught on," and even portly dowagers indulge in it. These declare that the method of practising, which consists of skipping upstairs in order to attain just the right kind of skip required for the dance in the ballroom, is the most effective weight-reducing exercise they have struck as yet.

Ambition.

Uncle Horace (who is something of a sage and philosopher)—My boy, it is time for you to think seriously of the kind of future you intend to map out for yourself. To sum it up in a word, what epitaph are you anxious to have engraved upon your tombstone? Nephew just beginning his career)—"He Got His Share."—London Telegraph.

Incorporated.

"Dearest, take no stock in these reports you hear. You have a monopoly on my affections."
 "John, I will trust you forever."
 "Love, let us combine."
 Whereupon she went into the hands of the receiver, and the bonds of matrimony soon followed.—Stanford Chaparral.

REJECTED LOVERS' FREAKS

Disappointed People Who Have Kept Strange Vows.

There recently died in Paris an old man who for over forty years had wandered nightly through the streets of the Gay City in search of his sweetheart, who mysteriously disappeared on the eve of her wedding. Her husband-to-be was finally convinced that she had been kidnapped, and he vowed that he would find her. Every evening, after finishing his work, he would walk about the streets of Paris anxiously scanning the faces of the women he met in the hope of meeting his lost one. He kept up his search in vain to within a few days of his death.

Only a little time back Magdalene Hermann, of Gronau, Saxony, was removed to an asylum for the mentally diseased, and her confinement there added the closing chapter to a pathetic romance. Twenty years ago a smart artillery regiment was quartered at Gronau during the Imperial manoeuvres and Magdalene fell in love with a sergeant, who finally promised her marriage. The promise, however, was not seriously intended, and the false soldier left her. From the day of his disappearance the girl never ceased to meet trains that came from the sergeant's garrison town in the hope that he would return to her. He never appeared, and Magdalene jumped to the conclusion that the German War Office opposed the wedding and was keeping the sergeant from her. Thereupon she bombarded the military authorities with petitions for permission to marry the soldier, and when they ceased to answer her letters she fancied that the post office was suppressing them. Until the day when she was removed to the asylum she walked ten miles daily to post her letters in a neighboring town.

An extraordinary character was Jules Bourglay, who lived for the greater part of his life in caves and woods, and who died a year or so ago on a common. He was a miserable-looking individual, and was known as "The Old Leather Man" on account of his always being dressed in a suit of leather. For over thirty years he wandered over portions of Eastern New York and Connecticut. A disappointment in love was said to have made him vow that he would never again allow himself to have the society of a woman, and for that reason he shut himself up in the woods.

One of the strangest men who ever lived died some time ago at the Winchester Workhouse. His name was George Montagu Hawkins, but to the authorities he was known as "The Silent Man" owing to the fact that during the fifteen years he had been an inmate of the institution he only spoke twice. The first occasion on which he made use of his tongue was a few years ago when he asked the master for his own clothes so that he might take his discharge, and the second was two days before his death when he suggested to those attending him that he might be allowed to get up.

A Portsmouth lawyer once visited Hawkins at the Winchester Workhouse and informed him that a relative had died and left him a legacy. "The Silent Man" was not at all pleased with the news, and when he was asked to sign a paper in order to become possessed of the sum of money that had been bequeathed to him he shook his head and walked away. As a result the legacy was never paid over to him.

Dr. Fowler's
EXTRACT OF
Wild Strawberry
Soon Relieved Their Sufferings.
THEIR TROUBLE WAS DIARRHOEA.

Mrs. EDWARD KINGSTON, Mirror, Alta., writes: "Coming to the North West from B.C. in the summer of 1910, we were face to face with the serious problem of being able to secure good drinking water; this we could not get, so were obliged to drink water containing a great deal of alkali, with the result that we were all troubled with Diarrhoea. Fortunately we had a bottle of Dr. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY in the house, which soon relieved our sufferings. I have always kept a bottle in the house since obtaining such beneficial result from its use when my boy, as a baby, was similarly troubled."
 "It has always proved a friend in need."

Make up your mind to insist on getting "Dr. FOWLER'S," when you go to your local dealer. Don't accept some of the "phoney" preparations that some of the unscrupulous dealers try to pass off as "Dr. FOWLER'S."

Problems of the Large Employer

In the small factory, frequently managed by a resident owner, the continuance of a system of direct contact between employer and worker has generally operated to maintain and perpetuate harmonious relations. The problem before the large corporation-owned plant is to provide that ready touch which, by emphasizing the essential community of interests, establishes a sense of unity and fellowship. It can be done only by making this oneness of aim and interest a reality, and not merely the occasion for pleasant speech-making. It cannot be done by reducing wages; it may be done by dividing profits. Success depends principally on an unflinching insight into the needs and problems of the body of employees, and that insight can only be obtained by sharing the problems of management with the men. The degree to which employers are prepared to go in this direction is a sound indication of their earnestness in desiring the removal of the prevailing mood of discontent.—Engineering Magazine.
