

The Cynic's Epigrams
No man is happy unless he thinks he is.
The school of experience grants mighty few holidays.
Truth is what a man knows; what a woman believes.
There is always room at the top, but the elevator service is poor.
After a man arrives the world never asks what route he came over.
Few men reach 60 without wishing they had been more economical.

AMATEUR PICTURES ENLARGED AT HOME

Good Results by Any Camera Lover
With no Expense Except for the Large Size Paper

It is an easy matter to enlarge snapshots to a suitable size for framing, and it is not necessary to have a lot of fancy and costly apparatus to do it with. Almost any hand camera can be turned into an enlarging camera and fine results can be obtained.

The principal requisite is a room in which all light can be excluded and which has a window that will let in unobstructed light where you want it. A disused attic chamber or a store-room will be fine. Even the cellar can be used if the cellar has a window that admits a lot of light. Cover the glass in the window sash with black paper and make it absolutely light tight, except for one place that is just the size of the camera box. If the window sash has four panes or glass it would be well to take out one pane for this purpose. Fit your camera tightly into the opening. If possible let this really be a hole in the window. You can then add to the light by equipping your camera back with a reflecting mirror.

Fit the back of your camera to the opening in the window and see that there are no leaks of light around it. The entire amount of light let into the room should come directly through the camera. Put the plate or film which you are to print in a plate holder or printing frame and attach it to the back of the camera so that the light will come through it and pass into the camera. Fix your plate or film with the image upside down.

Then place a table near to the window and put an easel or drawing board upon it so that the beam of light passing through the camera will fall on the board. Close the shutter of the camera. Pin a piece of bromide paper to the drawing board while the light is excluded from the room, and when all is fixed open the camera. The light passing through the plate and then the lens will print the image accurately on the bromide paper. The size of the enlargement depends on the distance the drawing board is from the lens. When you have your picture printed as you desire fix it in the way prescribed for bromide papers and your enlargement is finished.

Simple, isn't it? And yet it gives the finest sort of results.

WHAT COAL CAN DO

Does anyone realize the power of coal as a worker? A man was set to work a pump as hard as he could all day, and at the end of ten hours it was found that he had done just as much work as a little less than 2 ounces of coal could do.

Taking all the energy put forth by a hard-working man during one whole year, the same amount of force would be furnished by 36 pounds of good coal—or, say, 40 pounds of average coal.

Of course, even in the best engines, the greater part of the working energy of coal is wasted. But even if only one-tenth is turned to account, 150 pounds of coal is equal to a man working for 300 days of the year.

A horse can do as much work as ten men, but 1½ pounds of coal has as much working force as a horse expends in one day. So that a ton of coal, if we could use all its force, would do as much work as six horses working for a whole year!

ICELESS REFRIGERATOR

Keeps the Contents at a Desirable Temperature by Use of Water

The iceless refrigerator is not intended to put the ice man out of business, but is meant for service in localities not traversed by that august individual. This cooler consists of a stout wire mesh covered with an absorbent cotton cloth. The base and top are of metal, with provision made for accommodating a quantity of water. After this has been poured into the

REFRIGERATOR WITHOUT ICE.
Interior of the cooler it is conveyed to the cloth by means of several wicks, so that the cloth is always moist as long as there is water in the tank. The evaporation of this water on the exposed surface of the cloth causes the temperature to lower, so that the interior is maintained at a temperature of about 50 degrees, which is sufficient for a great many purposes.
