SAVING THE FARMER

Discussing the Liberal proposal for the abolition of the taxes on food, The Tory Toronto News rises to re-

"It is the farmer alone upon whom the whole burden of the new Liberal fiscal policy is to fall. His alone amongst Canadian industries is to be exposed to unobstructed competition from other countries. The new battlecry of Liberalism is down with prices on the farmers' markets." Replying to the above The Toronto

"The News at last gets in behind the food taxes. The farmer must be saved-from himself if necessary. In the west he has declared most emphatically against food taxes as an obstruction to his business, an obstruction that must be removed. The grain growers of the Prairie Provinces insist on the removal of the tariff levied upon wheat and flour entering Canada. They declare that it does them harm rather than good They sell their wheat for prices lower than could be obtained in the United States, and purchase their flour for prices higher than are obtained for the same flour in the British market

"Does The News think," says The Globe, "that the Canadian producers of foodstuffs should be protected in this home market while the markets of the United States and Great Britain are open duty free for his pro-ducts? If ie does why not why not say so plainly and see what the food consumers-farmers as well as town dwellers-think about the retention of food taxes undes such conditions?"

The subsidized Tory press, in a frantic effort to explain away the Tory defeat in South Bruce, declare that the Liberal victory was the result of a race appeal to the German electors. Well, how about East Middlesex? In this constituency the Tories had a majority of 685 in the general election two years ago. At the byeelection last week it was cut to 368.
