G. W. HARRISON, Manager. FREDERICTON BRANCH,

It is a popular belief that "genius can only develop in "selfish solitude." A study of the lives of some of our greatest writers and thinkers, however, reveals the fact that much of their finest work was done after marriage, when they enjoyed the companionship of wives and children. Charles Kingsley, for instance, had an ideal home, and was never happier than when playing with his children. He gave them the best of everything, the largest and sunniest rooms in the house, and the best part of the garden as a playground. He was passionately devoted to children, and their griefs made him sad. "A child weeping over a broken toy," he wrote, "is a sight I cannot bear."

Wordsworth was a happy husband, and wrote one of his prettiest poems to his wife, while Tennyson had a liking for domesticity, and in spite of a happy home, which critics contend is liable to damp genius, was able to write undying verse.

George Borrow did all his best work after his marriage, and if he had married earlier would not have wasted so much time writing pot-boilers, while Froude did better after he had started domesticity. William Black found it so difficult to write when apart from his wife that once when he went alone to Brighton to start a new novel he had to telegraph to her to join him. He tried shutting himself in a room and walking up and down the shore, but in the end he went to the telegraph office.

Browning had one of the best of homes, and some of his finest poems were written to his wife.

Southey found domesticity so necessary and inspiring that he married twice, while Carlyle's wife was invaluable as a listener. He used to rush down from the room in the roof to read chapters about the great Frederick to her and then rush back again.

granddaughter of the famous editor Horace Greeley. She took up newspaper work in New York and developed into one of the most brilliant of women reporters.

Dr. Emily Stowe Was the First Woman to Practice in Canada

The distinction of being the first woman graduate in medicine in Canada belongs to Dr. Augusta Stowe-Gullen, a leading physician of Toronto, who was born in Norwich, Ontario. She studied at the Toronto School of Medicine, graduating from Victoria and Trinity Universities. Her mother, the late Dr. Emily Howard Stowe, was the first woman to practice medicine in Canada. Dr. Stowe graduated from the New York Medical College for Women in 1868, and was an untiring worker in the fight to secure the admission of women to the university.

In this day of enlightenment, when women doctors are many in Canada, it is not easy for one to recognize fully the difficulties that lay in the path of this pioneer. Dr. Stowe's struggle to practise in Toronto was filled with difficulties, but she surmounted them, and won as well, for the women of this country, the opening to many spheres of activity.

Her daughter, moreover, did not find her path pleasant when she was studying for her life work, for there were many before she graduated in 1883, bitterly opposed to women entering the higher professions. But her perseverance made the way easier for the women who followed, and, for this, as well as her brilliancy in her profession and in other lines of endeavor, Dr. Stowe-Gullen is eminent among Canadian women just as her mother was revered for her fine qualities.

The trite expression, "It is the little things in life that count," is aptly illustrated by noting the fortunes that have been made out of the small inventions. Fifteen thousand dollars was the magnificent sum received by De Quillfeldt, a New Jersey inventor, for a rubber bottle-stopper which he invented. A lead-pencil rubber eraser increased the fortunes of Hyman L. Lipman, of Philadelphia, by the snug sum of $200,000; George Heaton, of Providence, R.I., used a metal staple to fasten a button on his shoe, conceived the idea of patenting the same, and now writes his cheque for six figures.

The oldest national flag in the world is that of Denmark, which dates from 1210.

There are fewer suicides among miners than among any other class of workmen.

Time "Pape's Diapepsin!" In Five Minutes all Stomach Misery is Gone

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"Really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that just that—makes Pape's Diarrpsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diarrpsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapers will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 22.—Occupying first place among the events of the week will be the wedding of Miss Jessie Wilson, second daughter of the President and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, and Francis B. Sayre. The wedding will take place in the East Room of the White House at 4.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and Rev.
Sylvester W. Beach, the President's pastor at Princeton, N.J., will perform the ceremony.

Miss Margaret Wilson will be her sister's maid of honor and the bridesmaids are to be Miss Eleanor E. Wilson, younger sister of the bride; Miss Mary G. White of Baltimore, a college friend of Miss Jessie Wilson; Miss Adelaide Mitchell Scott, daughter of Professor William B. Scott of Princeton; Miss Marjorie Brown, a daughter of Mrs. Wilson's cousin, Col. E. T. Brown of Atlanta. Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, with whom Mr. Sayre worked in Labrador, is to be best man. The ushers will be classmates of Mr. Sayre at Williams College or at the Harvard Law School.

If the machinery of government in Washington ever comes to a standstill, it is likely to reach a dead stop during the coming week. With the wedding at the White House on Tuesday and the observance of the national holiday on Thursday it is safe to predict that the week will be a quiet one in official circles so far as the transaction of important affairs is concerned.

And before the end of the week is reached, there will be yet another event to divert the attention of the men who manage the affairs of the nation. This will be the annual Army-Navy football game, which doubtless will cause a great exodus of admirals, generals, diplomats and a major part of officialdom from Washington to New York, where the game will be played Saturday afternoon. If his engagements permit the President will attend the game with the members of his family.

Chairman Elliott, at monthly meeting said no demand had been made on New Haven by Attorney General to hasten re-organization; only routine business transacted.

Mr. A. W. Dryden, Amherst, N.S., writes:—“I am glad to tell you what Budek Black Thistles has done for us. My son ‘Vance,’ when only nine months old, got an abscess on his cheek bone. I took him to a doctor in St. John, N.B., and he lanced it, and told me it would get well in a few days, and wanted me to keep it squeezed out. It did not seem to get any better, so my wife took him back. The Doctor told her to take him home and it would get any better. It would gather and break, and it went on that way until he was over four years old.

"He lost four pieces of bone out of where it was lanced, and two pieces came from his mouth; he has lost all of his cheek bone, and his eye was drawn down. I took him to doctors in St. John, Moncton, and Amherst, and all wanted me to let him go under an operation. He was so small I told them that if he was going to die he might as well die as he was as to go there and be all cut to pieces, so I declined to have the operation done. I told them I was going to try Burdock Blood Bitters, as I had heard my mother talk so much about it. I got a bottle of it and when it was about half gone noticed it was doing good, and in a few more days the sore stopped running, and healed up, and the abscess has never broken out again. This happened nearly a year ago, so you can see I have great faith in Burdock Blood Bitters, and I can say with all my heart that it is the best blood medicine in the world."
