MARYSVILLE REPRESENTED.

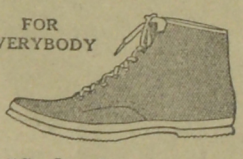

This might well be called Marysville Day at the exhibition, judging from the large number of people from that town. The Cotton Mill was closed down at noon yesterday for the remainder of the week in order to allow the operatives a chance to attend the fair. They certainly took advantage of the occasion and turned out in force today.

THEY WERE AFRAID.

On Wednesday a party of ladies driving in Wilnot Park were horrified to see two men, strangers in the city asleep in a carriage with the carriage robe and their clothing afire. The men were "dead to the world" and could not be awakened. The ladies were in a quandry but happened to see the hose-wagon driving along Odell Avenue. The firemen were told and attended to the men.
