GET A TEN CENT BOX OF CASCARETS

Insures You for Months Against Headache, Biliousness, Constipation or a Bad Stomach

Put aside—just once—the Salts, the Cathartic Pills, the Castor Oils or purgative waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage or alimentary organs and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your inside organs pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

INTERESTING PAPER ON ENGLAND'S GREATEST SOLDIER

The following interesting sketch of Lord Roberts was read at the meeting of the Epworth League of the Methodist Church on Tuesday evening by Private J. J. Anderson of the Royal Canadian Regiment:

Lord Roberts is England's greatest soldier, known to his country as "Boys," God bless him. That familiar ejaculation represents very clearly the feeling with which Lord Roberts is regarded by the men who have the honor to serve under him.

There have been comparatively few great soldiers who have been able to inspire throughout the ranks of their armies a feeling of genuine devotion. Physically, this dapper little gentleman can hardly be called impressive. Oratorically, he has nothing vibrant nor moving about him. Professionally, he, like other great generals, has laid himself open more than once to charges of rash tactics which might have involved a less lucky man in serious disaster. But if a man is wanted to lead men, whatever the difficulties and obstacles, to make a mixed army feel itself to be a solid efficient body, ready to follow its commander anywhere, and to do anything for him. If in a word, you want a truly great leader, there is only one man in the world, and that is "Boys!"

Born in Cawnpore in 1832, the son of the late General Abraham Roberts an Indian veteran, young Frederick Sleigh Roberts was educated at Eton, a school which has produced a large number of our great public men. In 1851 he entered the Bengal Artillery as an ensign, and on the Indian Mutiny breaking out, he was appointed to the quartermaster general's department, and soon became prominent as one of the most gallant and efficient young officers in the army.

HOW HE WON THE V.C.

At the siege and capture of Delhi, Lieut. Roberts repeatedly distinguished himself. Time and again he would expose himself to the enemy's fire for the purpose of making observations. At the relief of Lucknow and the operations around Cawnpore which finally ended in the capture of Lucknow, he was highly mentioned in despatches. It was at the battle of Khudagang that Roberts earned the much-coveted V.C. twice over. General Hope-Grant, seeing a great opportunity for the cavalry to inflict heavy loss on the fleeing enemy, gave orders for the 9th Lancers to advance. Lieut. Roberts being a staff officer, attached himself to the charging cavalry. The chase continued for about three miles, when they overtook a batch of 200 mutineers, who faced about and fired into the close formed ranks of the charging squadrons. At close quarters young Roberts seemed to bear a charmed life. He saw Colonel Younghusband, a very dear friend of his, fall, but could not go to his aid, as at the same time one of his sows was attacked and was in great danger from a Sepoy who was attacking him with a bayonet. Roberts with a staff sword entered into the melee and Mr. Rebel ceased to exist. A little later he saw two Sepoys making off with a standard, a proceeding to which Roberts did not acquiesce, so he rode after the rebels, overtook them and whilst wrenching the standard out of the hands of one of them, whom he killed, the other Sepoy put his rifle close to his body and fired but fortunately for Roberts and the British empire, it missed fire. For these two brave actions he was awarded the Victoria Cross.

Between 1863 and 1872 he did excellent work as a staff officer on several punitive expeditions, yet it was not until 1880 that Roberts proved his great ability. Placed in command of a mixed force of 2,000 men, he began his never-to-be-forgotten march from Kabul to Candahar. There he proved himself to be a leader of men. He conveyed safely 2,000 men and 11,000 animals through a rugged and mountainous country, the gradient being in many places one in four. Yet nothing seemed to daunt this human dynamo, who infused his great courage and ardour into those under his command.

On occasion he himself actually helped to drive the pack animals. Officers and men suffered greatly from the extremes of temperature, having to wear the same clothes whether the thermometer was freezing at dawn or at 110 at mid-day.

Scarcity of water was a great source of trouble to them, whilst the constant sandstorms and dust raised by the column in its progress added greatly to their discomfort, yet there was no complaining or needless falling out of ranks. About 150 men fainted while on the march and had to be taken up by the rear-guard, for it was certain death to fall into the hands of the treacherous Afghans, who always hovered like birds of prey on the flanks and rear of this irresistible column. He had inspired in all ranks that genuine devotion which would lead men to the very gates of hell, providing he was their leader. On the 31st of August he marched his triumphant force into Kandahar, just over 300 miles from Kabul. The story of Roberts' great march and of the battle resulting is written large in our military annals and will never be forgotten. Such is the barest outline, which in this case is all that is possible, of the career of this great fighting soldier prior to his taking the command of the forces in South Africa.

IN SOUTH AFRICA.

There are few more touching pages in our military history than those on which is written the story of Lord Roberts' acceptance, at the age of sixty-seven, of this great responsibility, whilst yet stricken with grief at the loss of his only son, who died defending the guns at Colenso, on the banks of the Tugela River.

As soon as Roberts took over the command of the troops, who on occasion had been severely handled by the Boers, he seemed to infuse new life into the whole army. And in 1900 he began his triumphant march to Pretoria.

By a series of brilliant manoeuvres he forced Lang's Neck with little loss, and soon afterward compelled the famous Cronje to surrender at Paardeburg, where the Canadian Volunteers covered themselves with glory, having done more than all of the troops under Roberts' command to make him hoist the white flag.

But we must not let the brilliant story of Lord Roberts' brilliant triumphs in the field obscure our view of another side of his life's work, namely, Temperance, the good effects of which, mainly due to his untiring efforts, have been felt throughout the whole British army during the last twenty years. About twenty-five years ago, on his strong recommendation, Lord Dufferin, then viceroy, established clubs or recreation rooms apart from the canteen. This conferred upon the British soldier a benefit the value of which is difficult to estimate.

Lord Roberts, in urging the above measure to the viceroy, said that the British army in India could have no better or more beneficial memorial to Queen Victoria's Jubilee than the abolition of that relic of barbarism, namely, the canteen, and its supersession by an institution under Christian management. Another great measure which he succeeded in carrying through was the amalgamation of the various sectarian societies that existed in India for the prevention of intemperance into one denominational society under the name of the A.T.A.

The success of the A.T.A. may be gauged by the fact that when Lord Roberts left India one-third of the 10,000 white troops there were members of it.

A tactful, thoughtful and energetic administrator, he has always used his popularity to the advantage of those whom he has for the time being commanded.

Another matter which Lord Roberts has strongly advocated of late is universal training and the need of becoming proficient in the use of the rifle.

He is now in his eighty-first year, still hale and hearty, and ever ready to give a helping hand to former comrades in need of assistance.

It was he who roused England to a sense of duty in regard to her veterans who were allowed to languish in work-houses and go to a pauper's grave.

Throat Was So Sore Could Hardly Speak.

Mr. Gordon Murphy, Elliott's Mills, P.E.I., writes:—"Too much praise cannot be given your valuable remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I suffered terribly from a severe cold during the early part of last winter and found it almost impossible to get anything to relieve me. Hoarseness seemed to be continually troubling me, and my throat was so sore I could hardly speak for quite a long time. At last I was advised to try your remedy, and in a short time I got relief, and have never been troubled with a sore throat or hoarseness since. I hope others will be fortunate enough to give your remedy a trial and be convinced that it is all I say it to be."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is without an equal for Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Bronchitis and all Affections of the Throat and Lungs.
