MOULIN ROUGE DANCE SCENES A FINE SHOW

One which promises to be one of the most fascinating photoplays of the season is "Queen of The Moulin Rouge" the feature de luxe which will be presented at The Gaiety Theatre, Monday and Tuesday of this week.

A famous old music master of Paris, ambitious to climax his successful career by presenting a genius of the violin to the world, has detected latent genius in an American student; and though he has developed the student's technique to a state of perfection, he is unable to fan the smouldering embers of genius into flame.

Then a little maiden from Normandy, herself seeking a career as a dancer, comes into the life of the boy. Love blossoms. And the crafty old master, wise in the ways of the world, seeing in that great love the means of realizing his ambition, induces the girl to dance in the Moulin Rouge, most notorious of the night-life resorts in the gay capital of pleasure, knowing that she will thus deliberately sacrifice the respect of the world—knowing, too, that this will plunge grief and bitterness into the heart of his beloved pupil, and wishing to torture him that he might awaken his soul.

Did the end justify the means, or was another victim of man's injustice to find solace in the cold embrace of the Seine? Is woman's honor to be ruthlessly bartered for that fleeting success which turns men's heads and blinds them to the sacrifices which paved their way to fame? For if genius were awakened in this lad, would he thank a creature of the most notorious cabaret in the Montmartre—would he believe she could have risen from an embryo dancer to the very queenship of this gilded palace of extravagance without defilement?

One cannot foresee the answers to these questions in Pyramid's production of "Queen of the Moulin Rouge." And there results a climax rife in its suspense and gripping in its play upon the emotions.

Martha Mansfield, as the girl who is called upon for this supreme sacrifice; Joe Striker, as the student; Henry Harmon, as the ambitious music master, are the principals of a highly capable all-star cast.

FINDS IT EASY TO MAKE FRIENDS

(New York Sun.)

A Long Island comedian who found it somewhat difficult to make acquaintances when he first moved to his town and who has known of others in a similar plight says he has solved the trouble.

Take it from me he remarked it is the simplest thing in the world and the cost is not burdensome get a nest of light and easily handled ladders and a good substantial collapsible step ladder and that is all there is to it.

The borrowing and lending breaks the ice and the rest develops in natural course the fellow with the ladders will be it until spring and then he will share the distinction with the neighbor who is fortunate possessor of a lawn roller.

Big Crowds Assemble to Hear Premier King

Smith's Falls, Ont., Dec. 3—Restoration of the pension rights of the Grand Trunk strikers of 1910 again figured prominently in the Lanark by-election contest Saturday night, when at the Liberal meetings held in this, the Labor centre of the riding, the Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, and Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, both dealt with the matter, revealing some further inside history in this matter, which has many times been the subject of debate on the floor of Parliament.

The statements were made in answer to a recent speech by the former Minister of Labor, Hon. G. D. Robertson, in which he was reported as saying that the King government should not take credit for settling matter and restoring the men's pension rights, as this had been done by W. D. Robb, vice-president and general manager of the G. T. R.

Both the Prime Minister and Hon. Mr. Murdock had participated in the 1910 negotiations which resulted in the men returning to work upon the signing of an agreement by the company guaranteeing to restore to them all pension and seniority rights, it was contended. This agreement had been carried out in full only during recent weeks.

The Minister of Labor told of a conference in Rt. Hon. Mr. King's office during the last session when G. Howard Kelly, then president of the Grand Trunk, had been called to Ottawa and asked to furnish a complete statement covering the matter. After receiving this information the King government had intimated both to the new president, Sir Henry Thornton, and to Mr. Robb of the Grand Trunk that it desired a settlement of the men's rights.

As a result the necessary steps had been taken to give the men back their rightful seniority and pensions and checks were now being forwarded to pensioners who were receiving amounts ranging from a few hundreds to several thousands of dollars. A total of something like $55,000 was involved in the settlement.

Meighen's Letter

Mr. Murdock asserted that the Meighen government had been very unsympathetic toward the former strikes and their demands. He quoted a letter, written by Rt. Hon.

Arthur Meighen to Senator Robertson while the then Premier was making his tour of the Dominion just prior to the last election. It acknowledged receipt of a memorandum dealing with the settlement of the strike and the agreement signed between the company and its employees, and commenting on the memorandum, Mr. Meighen wrote:

"The men, being given satisfactory assurance of return, gave up their strike. They therefore should, it seems clear to me, be placed in the same position as if the promise of the Grand Trunk management had been strictly kept. To place them in this position does not mean necessarily restitution of pension rights—(indeed, as stated before, the argument on that point is to my mind very impressive to the contrary.) It would mean, however, reinstatement at least of salary rights and of any other rights, if any, affected by their not being taken back as promised.

"You may be able to offset the argument of this memorandum as to pensions, I merely give you my observations after reading same."

This letter, Mr. Murdock contended, showed where Rt. Hon. Mr. Meighen had stood in regard to restitution of the men's rights. Senator Robertson had tried to secure the men affected their pension rights as from June 1, 1920, when the railways were taken over by the government, but had been unable "to put even this over," with an unsympathetic government against him.

Crowds Hear King

In the evening, the Prime Minister addressed a capacity audience, afterwards speaking at the Princess Theatre to a second crowded house. An overflow meeting was also held in the Town Hall. Hon. James Murdock and W. G. Raymond, member for Brantford, also addressed the three evening meetings.

Closing his reference to the Grand Trunk strikers, the Prime Minister declared the restitution of the men's rights had been the righting of a great wrong. He had waited a long time to obtain the removal of this "injustice," and if another such case came to his notice, he would, if necessary, spend the rest of his life in "trying to secure whatever were necessary to remove the injustice and secure for the aggrieved parties their rights."

CONSTANTINES BROTHER IS BANISHED

Athens Dec. 3—Prince Andrew brother of former King Constantine has been sentenced by a military court to banishment for life and degradation of his rank. He will not suffer actual degradation. The judge ment of the court finds that Prince Andrew refused to obey orders in presence of the enemy and moved his army corps in another direction but considers that in view of his lack of experience in commanding large masses of fighting troops and the conditions under which he was placed application of the penalties provided by law would not be justifiable.

The trial of the prince closed last night after been examined and pled had been made by counsel for the defense for clemency. The indictment brought against him set forth that during the advance on the Sangaris River, Prince Andrew commanding the second army corps refused to obey an order to attack the enemy.

Royalty had a bad time during the final stages of the inquiry. The prosecutor dwelt on the disavantages of employing princes in high positions; in the army he pointed out that their influence was pernicious not only in Greece but in all countries.

DELEGATES WILL DO WELL

Washington, Dec. 1—The administration believes that the achievements of United States delegates at the Lausanne Near East peace conference "will surpass the imagination," it was made known at the White House today in connection with a statement on behalf of President Harding that confidential reports showed so far everything is "going along fine and satisfactory."

Nothing is prettier than an apple crop with no wormholes in it.

WAR RECORD WINS FORTUNE FOR OFFICER

Minneapolis, Dec. 4—His World War record with the British army won him a share of his father's millions although his career did not comply with the terms of the will but Captain George Camp Douglas will not have his legacy of approximately $750,000 to spend as he pleases according to a decision of the local Probate Court.

Walter T. Douglas his father perished when the Titanic sank. His will provided that Captain Douglas must earn $2500 a year for two successive years before he could claim his legacy.

The trustees held however that Captain Douglas' war record was equivalent to the demands of the will although he did not make the specified amount.

GOOD SHOW AT THE CAPITOL

The photoplay for the first three days of this week is "The Green Temptation" with Betty Compson the featured player.

It keeps one busy identifying Betty wigs and nobody but a detective Compson in her various aliases and lover could have stood the strain. There are many scenes dear to the heart of the picture fan. A glimpse of Apache dens, where rough dances are in progress. Large social gatherings teeming with well jewelled people. A series of startling costumes for Betty Compson. A dance with a pet leopard. In fact, it all moves like the illustrations in a press book. There is a lobby poster in every shot.

Betty Compson plays it all in an appealing and ladylike way.

Theodore Kosloff is the Apache and Mahlon Hamilton the detective who wins the girl.

As the turnip might come; Every day in every way I am getting bitter and bitter.

BIG SUM WAS COLLECTED IN BOOZE FINES

Washington Dec. 4—Fines collected is 23,786 Federal criminal cases disposed of in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922 enriched the Government by $3,531,593.53 Attorney General Daugherty said today. The chief sources of that revenue came from fines for the violation of the Volstead act and the Food and Drug Act.

Collections and deposits in 3064 civil suits and in 254 compromised cases in that period amounted to $2,116,672.15. Those sums added to the amounts deposited in suits and deceased seamen's wages waiting unclaimed in court registries bring the total up to $5,718,118.73.

JAIL BROKER FOR 5 YEARS

New York, Dec. 4—Alfred E. Lindsay, South Nyack broker who pleaded guilty last March to swindling prominent society women, of New York out of $500,000 through fake stock selling schemes, today was sentenced to State's prison at hard labor from five to ten years.

Judge Mancuso in imposing sentence said: "You made women of means your prey. You turned their heads by lavishly entertaining them with their own money. Your crime is no less an offense than highway robbery or burglary. It is true your victims were people of wealth, yet you left them impoverished. You stole $325,000 from Mrs. Lillian B. Duke and my investigation shows that none of the money you got from these women was invested."

O'DOWD WON

New York, Dec. 3—Mike O'Dowd of St. Paul won over Dave Rosenberg of New York on a foul in the eighth round of a 15-round bout. Rosenberg was disqualified for hitting low after two minutes and 28 seconds of fighting in that round. O'Dowd was leading by a wide margin when the bout ended.
