POPPY DAY

Will be observed this year on Armistice Day, which falls on Saturday, Nov. 11th. The Fredericton Branch of the G. W. V. A. is ready to supply the following outlying districts in addition to those which co-operated with the Society in making Armistice Day of 1921, such a great success: Fredericton Junction, Tracey Station, Gagetown, Upper Gagetown, Oromocto, Millville and Hawkshaw.

The poppies in 1921 were supplied by children in France. This year they are being manufactured by the disabled soldiers in Canadian hospitals so that all money derived from their sale will remain in Canada. Any society wishing to cooperate with the G. W. V. A. in the sale of poppies on Armistice Day will please communicate with the undersigned.

G. W. HOLMES

Should be Fattened And Marketed Early

Whether you have a large or a small flock of cockerels to dispose of, it will pay you to fatten and market them early. It is apparent that prices for dressed and live poultry will decline more rapidly as the season advances than in former years and the object should be to market the surplus just as soon as it is in a marketing condition, according to the Poultry Department of Macdonald College, which has always found that it pays to market cockerels early in the season even in some cases where the birds are not as well finished as they would be a little later on in the year.

A roaster of the highest quality is one which is young, full grown, plump and well finished. On the other hand a thin bird is not attractive when dressed and is not appetizing when roasted. The flesh appears shrunken and the bones are prominent and the meat is dry and tough. The fattening of poultry, then, is a finishing process. The object of fattening is to prepare in the best possible way poultry flesh for human consumption. Plump birds are in the greatest demand at highest prices, and birds of high quality always yield the largest profits. Fattening, then, means heavier birds and higher prices. There is usually a difference in price of five cents or more a pound between thin and plump poultry.

Best results are obtained by feeding all fattening birds on soft mash. The gain in weight is greater and the quality of the flesh is superior when wet mash is used than when the chickens are fed whole grain. The ground grains used to make up the mash are usually oatmeal, finely ground buckwheat, cornmeal, low grade flour and middlings. Various mixtures of these grains give satisfaction, but the actual price of each grain at any particular time determines its value as a fattening food. With a ration composed of two parts cornmeal, one part ground buckwheat, one part middling and five-eighths parts beef scraps, all parts by weight one pound of grain. These ground grains should be mixed thoroughly and the mixture moistened with sour skim milk. Milk is an excellent food for fattening chickens. It tends to develop the tissues and improve the quality of the meat. The proportion of milk to the mash mixture is about two pound of mash. Best results are secured when the food is mixed twelve hours previous to feeding. Give the birds grit once a week during the fattening period.

Great care should be taken not to feed the birds too much during the first four days of the two-week fattening period. Feed them very lightly three times per day for the first four days, then for the last ten days give them all they will eat three times per day, but do not leave feed before them.

There are two methods of fattening poultry for the market. The method usually employed on the farm is the pen method where the birds are con-finer in a pen or box-stall. The other method is crate fattening, and is usually more profitable. The fattening crates should be placed in a cool, comfortable place and where the bird will not be disturbed. The birds should be dusted with powder to rid them of lice and mites, otherwise they will not fatten most profitably.

Under average conditions a chicken will gain about one pound in weight after two weeks of careful feeding. A heavier bird at an increased price per pound means greater profits to producers and better satisfaction to consumers.

KISS IS NOT A MARRIAGE PROMISE

St. Paul, Nov. 4.—A kiss, no matter how packed with thrills, does not constitute a promise of marriage, the Supreme Court of Minnesota decided, thereby shattering the hopes of Mrs. Flore Jennings, 65-year-old widow. Her claim for $10,000 for alleged breach of promise was denied.

Mrs. Jennings answered an advertisement for housekeeper at the home of John Hunter, a wealthy farmer at Union Grove. At the end of the first month, Mrs. Jennings said, Hunter kissed her on the lips, and they became engaged. It was a real love kiss, she said.

Hunter contended that the kiss wasn't a promise.
