EDUCATION AND AUTOMOBILES

The authorities at Yale University have arrived at the conclusion that there are other means than the automobile for a studious youth in scholastic surroundings to gain relief from the ardors of study than running around the countryside in an automobile.

In token of this Yale students must now receive a license to use an automobile in addition to that conferred by a kindly state, this licensing power resting in the hands of the dean of each department of the university. A student must show good and sufficient reasons why he should be permitted to keep a car in New Haven before he can obtain sanction for it.

This radical interference with undergraduate privileges will materially shorten the range of the Yale student and tend to make Farmington and Northampton less effective matrimonial bureaus, to say nothing of reducing plate glass insurance rates in Bridgeport and Waterbury substantially on evening after athletic victories. There can be no doubt, either, that strict enforcement of the ruling will permit President Angell to pick up his Monday morning newspaper with considerably less trepidation.

As for raising scholarship standards at Yale, a motorless campus may help, though there are persons still alive who recall that even without automobiles in the old days there were means to be found to prevent a conscientious student from becoming over-educated.

CRAWLING TO BED

If we may credit the discovery of Miss Alice Craft, of the University Hospital, crawling to sleep is more than a mere form of words. She is said to have demonstrated successfully that if one actually crawls to bed sleep will come almost immediately.

The patient must get down on the floor and wriggle along like a caterpillar or go on all fours like a dog. Just how long this form of exercise must be indulged in is not disclosed, but reputable physicians are said to be convinced that it will cure the most obstinate case of insomnia.

We are now likely to hear of discussions in medical societies on the physical and psychological effect of a reversion to the form of our supposed ancestors. The caterpillar does not do much thinking and it has only a rudimentary nervous system. It may be that if one pretends to be a caterpillar one can forget for the moment that one is worried by the cares of the day and can approximate the mental stolidity of the worm.

But the reasons for the success of the new method of curing insomnia will not interest any one very much if the method cures. It is always the results that count, whether in medicine or anything else.

MORE THAN HALF WAY

To be willing to "meet people half way" is counted as a virtue. When we have announced that we are willing to "go half way" we feel rather proud of our fairness-and-squareness. We have a way of believing that if folks would only meet each other half way most of life's controversies would be ended. But as we grow older and observe more and think more and learn to set aside the trivial considerations of pride, we find that half way is not enough. It is our task to learn, with a good heart, to meet people more than half way. Don't expect to get something for nothing, but be willing to give something for nothing, if you would have a light heart. Those who put aside foolish pride and a revengeful spirit, and the thing that women call "cattiness," and are willing to go more than half way and to give something for nothing make a very real contribution to the happiness of a world that needs it.

A Rochester, N. Y., man reports to the police that robbers entered his sleeping room and stole $340 which he had secreted in his wooden leg. Evidently he hasn't any stove.

Princess Hermine says she is going to be the happiest woman in the world. That's the way they all talk—before the ceremony.

It takes all sorts of people to make a world, including the garage hand who wipes gear grease on his overalls and sits in the driver's seat.

Italy took a day off yesterday to hail the new premier. But human nature is fickle, and a week from today they may lay off to shower him.

And for subtle humor there's the thief in New York who removed a machine from its spare tire and stole the car.

A candidate for Premier in Italy nowadays is lucky if he can truthfully say he is in the hands of his friends.

In order to liven up the Hall case it may be necessary to make one or two of the detectives roll over.

A boy born in an automobile at Atlantic City Saturday has been named after the car. Yes, Henry's the name.

Through Our Sieve

Many a man who things he is addicted to grave deliberation is merely addicted to laziness.

Best cure for worry is to have so much trouble it isn't worth while.

An auto salesman talks as if a prospective customer were crippled in both of his legs.

We are not sure whether a sense of humor or common sense can do the better job of suppressing emotions of people.

Any gland treatment that would bring back measles and whopping cough youth would not appear to us.

It is entertaining to see the extraordinary suave man jarred into a cuss word. Everybody laughs but just him.

A salesman prefers to argue face to face instead of over the phone because the click of a receiver is too abrupt in ending an argument.

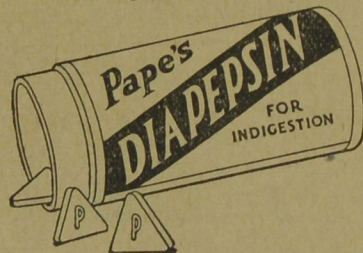

"If I were to bet on a hobby horse" remarked the man on the car it would collapse on homestretch.

Conscious may let a fellow sleep all night and still be on hand when every man expects some day to dispose of his used razor blades but the accumulation increases and nothing is done about it. hat to do with used razor blades is one of life's problems.

DIVORCE COURT HAS EIGHT NEW CASES FILED

and a child was born to the couple in August, 1922 at Victoria Public Hospital. The Petitioner asks divorce, naming the said Maud Coulsey as co-respondent. E. Allison McKay, Proctor.

A Woodstock Case

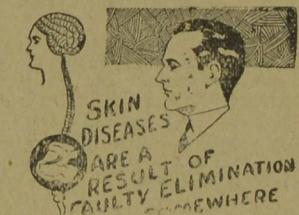

Hugh J. Stairs vs Mildred H. Stairs—The parties belong to Woodstock and were married in Montreal in November, 1913 by the Rev. L. B. Gibson Presbyterian, the defendant at the time being Mildred Flemming. Two children were born to the contracting parties, who now reside with their mother. The Petitioner alleges that in May, 1915 his wife left him and went and lived with her parents, that in September 1916 he enlisted with the 239th, served overseas and was honorably discharged in March, 1919, he accuses his wife of being unfaithful to her marriage vows during his absence and that in 1917 or the first part of 1918 she gave birth to an illegitimate child. One Ring is named as Co-respondent and divorce is asked on the usual grounds. G. Earle Logan, Proctor.

George Murray Cusack vs Margaret Cusack—The parties of Alward, Queen's County, the Complainant alleges that he was married to his wife, then Margaret Hopwood, at Nairn, Scotland, in December, 1918 by the Rev. John Roger, a Roman Catholic Priest, he at the time being a private in the Canadian Forestry Corps. They came to Canada in September, 1919 and the Plaintiff obtained employment at Alward with the C. N. R. he further alleges that his wife in October, 1919 at Mount Eagle, Wsetmordland County was unfaithful and also on several occasions subsequent, naming one Kenneth Cusack as Co-respondent, that in 1920 she went to Hamilton, Ont., where she now resides with her parents, who had come out from Scotland. The usual relief is sought. Frank A. McCully, Proctor.

Gordon W. Steeves vs Lena Steeves—Parties belong to Moncton. The Petitioner alleges that he was married to the defendant, then Lena O'Brien at Moncton in May 1914 by the Rev. Edward H. Cochrane, Baptist, that they lived together at Moncton until 1918 when they separated, that in 1921 his wife went to the United States and accuses her of being unfaithful at divers times and at divers place and names one Russel Steeves as co-respondent that in July 1922 the defendant gave birth to a child, the father of which is unknown. On these allegations a divorce is asked. E. A. Reilly, K. C., Proctor.

Charles Everett Foster vs. Annie Maud Foster—Parties of St. John and were married there in 1905 by the Rev. P. J. Stackhouse, Baptist, the defendant being Wheaton. The Complainant sets forth that he is a ship steward and that in 1921 while on a voyage his wife departed from their residence in St. John and has not returned, that on several occasions she has been unfaithful to her marriage vows and cites a number of instances naming one Alonzo Foster as co-respondent. In this case the accused through her Proctor, Daniel Mullin, K. C., has filed an appearance and defence. She denies all the material allegations as to her guilt, accuses her husband of ill-treatment and cruelty and of misconduct, setting forth several instances of the last, and naming a number of families as co-respondents. S. A. M. Skinner is the Proctor for the Plaintiff.

YOUR FUTURE FORTUNE: Send dime, birthdate and stamp for truth ful, reliable, convincing trial reading. Prof. Erwing, Box 1120, Station C, Los Angeles, California.

Every trouble that the human body suffers is traceable to a nerve center that is not functioning properly. Eye troubles are primarily due to the failure of some nerve to function properly. We adjust nerves to their normal conditions and thus relieve the effect, and cause.

We succeed where others fail.

Do You Give The Drug Store a Fair Deal?

A drug store is not merely a mercantile business. To fill the prescriptions your doctor has so carefully written, the prescription clerk must be trained to be careful and skillful along with a knowledge of the drugs he uses. All this is for the benefit of the public to which the drug stores are proud to cater. So when buying such goods as are sold by all stores the drug store should receive first call. What do you think about it?
