Men on Liquor Hunt Seize Garage and Capture Cop

New York, Sept. 26—Ten armed men forced their way into a garage at 627 East 156th street the Bronx early today disarmed and bound three civilians and a policeman ransacked the place at their leisure and left without taking anything of value. A general alarm has been sent out from headquarters for the ten. It is believed they were seeking a liquor laden truck and went to the wrong garage.

It was shortly before daybreak that the establishment was entered. Martin Brown a washer employed by the garage company was at work in the plant. William E. Fritz a taxicab driver had just driven in and a fruit merchant named Costelli a patron of the garage was in the building to get his truck out for morning deliveries.

The ten men drove up in two cars got out and marched swiftly to the door of the garage which they threw open before any of the three men present had a chance to cry out.

Inside they produced revolvers, searched the three men in the garage for weapons backed them into a corner and bound them. In one instance they added gags.

Policeman Is Seized.

While they were examining the machines in the place and particularly large trucks Policeman Bostwick of the Morrisania station attracted by the presence of the two automobiles in front of the door put his head in to investigate. He was promptly seized a hand was put over his mouth and he was bound and gagged after being relieved of his revolver and his shield which is No. 10611.

When the policeman had been disposed of the gunmen locked the door of the garage in order to pursue their investigations more at ease but after they had looked in every machine in the place and sounded them all for false bottoms and the other devices of rum running automobiles they left in disgust.

Shortly after the departure of the ten the four victims managed to wriggle loose from their bonds and give the alarm.

Brown, Costelli, Fritz and Policeman Bostwick were taken to Police Headquarters for questioning. Brown who saw the ten gunmen first said they told him they were looking for liquor.

They were apparently interested in nothing else. They ignored a $10,000 truckload of silk and did not enter the office in which were $500 in cash and $300 in securities.

INTENSE HEAT IN THE ARCTIC

For something like five weeks every summer more heat a day is received from the sun on a square mile in the Arctic than at the equator, asserts Vilhjalmur Stefansson in the National Geographic Magazine. If the North Pole were located on an extensive lowland, remote from high mountains or any large bodies of water, it would be about as hot as the equator on the fourth of July. There is, however, at the Pole and in many places in the remote north, a local refrigeration that tempers what otherwise would be unbearable heat. We can take it for certain that there is far less permanent ice and snow in the lowland of north Siberia than there is in the mountains of Mexico. It is even possible that tropical Africa, with its one or two snow-clad mountains, contains more permanent snow than do all the low-lands of Arctic Siberia.

THE CANADIAN DOLLAR AT PAR IN NEW YORK

New York Sept. 25—The New York Times devotes a column to comment on the fact that the Canadian dollar has reached par and to the history of the fall and rise of the currency of the dominion. These paragraphs occur in the course of the recital:

"Two factors stand out most prominently in the steady advance in Canadian exchange to a point where it is on a practical parity with the United States dollar after experiencing a discount which on Dec. 21, 1920, amounted to 19.25 per cent of par.

"One of them is the very large amount of Canadian provincial and dominion securities which have been sold to investors in the New York market, the other is the movement of a tremendous grain crop, which preliminary estimates place at more than 80,000,000 bushels above the crop of last year.
