SOMEWHERE, I KNOW.

Somewhere, I know, the sky at this bright hour
Is brighter than the long flash of the seas
Flung in a mellow curve against the breeze;
Somewhere, I know, one frail and wistful flower
Breathes to my heart more of the magic power
And pain of loveliness than all the trees
That shower ripe light on a thousand Hesperides
Leaving the stars ecstatic with the shower.

Somewhere, I know, there is an island's link
Of splendour beat and braided to the moon
Like blossom to blossom in an eternal June;
Somewhere, I know, there shines for me the brink
Of ultimate beauty, and may I thither climb
On the pale ladder of one immortal rime!

EASILY COMPUTED.

Youngsters Take Keen Interest in Track and Field Meet

The younger generation of athletes is manifesting marked interest in the track and field meet which will be held on Saturday next, King's Birthday, under the auspices of the York County A. A. A., for boys under the age of eighteen years. The attempt which is being made by Jack Lunn of the Y. M. C. A. with the support of the Rotary Club, is the first of its kind in years. In days gone by Fredericton was represented by some pretty good track athletes. Fred C. Squires now of Woodstock when at Normal School ran under Fredericton colors. Fred Dever now a banker in Havana also was a noted track man. Later there were long distance runners including Pat White and Tom Coward who made their mark. Possibly Fredericton is in for a revival in track and field sports. It has been long delayed. A better start could not be made than with the juniors younger than eighteen years.

Some of the youngsters are said to be so interested that they are training at four o'clock in the morning.

BASEBALL THIS WEEK

Marysville at Devon Tonight in Independent League—Imperials at Devon Thursday in Senior Amateur League

Marysville and Devon will clash at Devon this evening in the Independent League. Marysville if winning will be tied with Fredericton for first place. Devon may show a reversal of form and come out ahead and in that case will be ahead of Marysville in the league standing. Stranger things have happened.

The senior amateur league is to start at Devon Thursday night. The amateurs are expected to put up good games. The opener will hardly be taken as an indication of what the league will produce later but nevertheless will be watched with interest.

BIG LIST AT BROCKTON

Forty Thousand Dollars on the Card
For Fair Races

Boston, Massachusetts, May 30—The management of Brockton in its efforts to furnish racing of the highest quality of its big fair crowds set a new high water mark in 1921 for purse offerings over a half mile track. The sport provided in the $40,000 card last October was so satisfactory that the same amount of prize money was fixed upon this year, with nine $3,000 and one $2,000 early closing purses on the program.

The Grand Circuit purse plan for a half-mile track also meets with the approval of the men who have racing material, for the entry announced by Secretary Ralph T. Millet is the most remarkable in turf history, 300 individual horses have been named in the 10 events.

This record entry means a whole lot more than the fact that Brockton is to have some great racing this Fall.

It shows that the prominent fairs can offer uniform purses, of a size which less than a half dozen of the mile tracks can afford to equal for a regular race meet.

Brockton surely has blazed a trail which if followed by other fairs will make racing over the twice-around so attractive that the mile tracks will be hard put to maintain their place in the sun.

A feature of the Brockton entry is the absence of duplication, there being only a baker's dozen horses named in the two events. The slow trot drew 42 entries, the 2:17 pace, 40; the 2-year-old trot, 38; the 3-year-old trot, 36; the 2:19 trot, 34; the 2:16 trot, 32; the 2:13 pace, 30; 2:14 trot, 25; 2:11 trot, 18, and free-for-all, 18.

YOU CAN'T SEE SCENERY WITH AN AUTO HOUND

(New York Sun.)

William Scotland Road and Thomas Academy Street are commuters, and as they do not like to play bridge they while away the time consumed on the trip from South Orange every morning in conversation with each other. Yesterday they came to town together.

"I see Frank Maple Wood has bought a car," said William to his friend.

"Has he?" Thomas asked. "Then I suppose he'll become one of those auto hounds, like the rest of you fellows who own cars."

"Auto hounds? What do you mean?"

"Of course, you being an auto hound wouldn't know what one is."

"I'm an auto hound?"

"Yes, you're one of the most highly developed specimens I know."

William was beginning to get upset and he snapped. "I'll have you know Thomas Street, I'm not an auto hound or any other kind of canine."

"Don't get huffy, Bill till you know what one is. I don't doubt but that you boast to most of your friends of your abilities as an auto hound."

"Huh! I do what?"

"Yes, you think you can recognize most any make of car, don't you?"

"Sure I can."

He Knows Most of 'Em.

"And whenever you're out in your car you tell the rest of the people with you the name of every car you pass?"

"Well, not every car. There are a few I can't recognize."

"Oh, you're an auto hound all right! Your own words convict you."

"Well, don't you like to know the makes of the cars on the road?"

"No, I don't. Last week I went down to Barnegat fishing with a your auto hounds. We went down in one of those three passenger coupes where you can't help but hear every thing the driver says. I hadn't been along the Jersey shore road in a good many years and I had looked forward with a lot of enjoyment to the trip."

"But did I enjoy the trip? I did not. We weren't out of Newark before those two auto hounds got into an argument as to the year of a car we passed, and the argument lasted until after we got back home the next day, and ruined the trip for me. Both of them agreed on the make of the car but one of the birds said it was a late 1920 model while the other insisted that it was an early 1921."

Only Scenery Was Passing Cars.

"And that wasn't all. Whenever we were passing a particularly good looking house or a beautiful vista of ocean or anything of that kind which I wanted to look at, one of them would call my attention to a car we were passing. That's a Guzumph, he would say. Did you notice that hub cap?" Or. That car had some hood didn't it? That's a Gozoo."

"We got into a traffic jam at the Keyport Bridge, and we rammed another car because those two hounds were leaning out of our car trying to read the name on the hub cap on another car."

"This affliction never seems to attack a man until he acquires an auto mobile. So I'm never going to buy one. I have to work with my head for a living and as I figure it out my head will only hold a certain number of facts. So, if I have to fill it full of data as to the kinds of hub caps radiators hoods, tops, windows, door handles and the like that all the hundreds of makes of cars have there won't be any room in my head for the facts that are necessary to me to make a living. I'd rather go on in my colossal ignorance and not be able to tell one make from another."
