Canada Wants Immigrants Who Will Go On The Land

Ottawa, Jan. 13—Nothing shows the necessity of a wise and well-considered policy of immigration more than the fact, well known to all immigration officials on this side of the water, that a horde of immigrants is waiting on the other side for a letting down of the barriers. For example, it is said that there are not enough ships to carry all the Poles of Roumania, Poland, Lithuania, Russia and elsewhere, who would come if they could be sure of admittance. As it is, the Canadian immigration officials have found a more determined effort on the part of these European Jews to enter Canada than from any other race or nationality.

FLOCK TO CITIES.

The objection to these immigrants is not on racial grounds. The trouble is that they all gravitate to the already overcrowded cities, making still worse the disparity that exist between the rural and urban populations of Canada. What Canada most needs is experienced farmers of good character who will go on the land and make a success of it. There are scores of thousands who can be encouraged to come to Canada if proper arrangements are made for looking after them when they get here and giving them dependable advice and assistance.

Canada has had a do-nothing policy in immigration for many years. The influx in Laurier's time fell away. No considered policy has taken its place. The attitude today is very largely one of exclusion. This will be so until a businesslike way has been devised of reaching the people that are wanted in this country. If this is not done, men most in touch with the problem say, the matter will be beyond them in five years.

POWERFUL LOBBY.

It is no secret here that during the time since the armistice a strong lobby has been conducted in Ottawa for the admission of Jewish immigrants. No matter how poor the Jewish immigrant, he seemed to have a friend at court with influence and money. Around the corridor of Parliament last session it was often asserted that where a body of immigrants were held for deportation, influence had been brought to bear in many cases to revise the verdict against the Jews, while men of other races had to go back to the lands from which they came.

In this time of unemployment it is easy to see how much more serious would be the situation if scores of thousands of these people were allowed to enter Canadian cities.

SAVED FROM STREETS.

With regard to ex-service men who applied to come to Canada from Britain, the Canadian representative approved of only 5,000 out of 35,000 men. If he had not done so, a large number of the extra 30,000 would now be walking the streets of Canadian cities out of work.

It is reported that the influences which have secured the entry of so many Jews already will be brought to bear on Parliament at its next session, and that there will be a strong lobby in favor of the open door for immigration. The problem is not how to get people, but to get those who will go on the land.

The Railways of Canada Draw to Your Attention the

NEW RAILWAY RATES!

FOR PASSENGERS

The advance on sleeping and parlor car tickets authorized in 1920 has been cut in half—the advance made on ordinary fares at that time having been completely taken off many months ago.

FOR SHIPPERS

The percentage of advance granted to the Railways in 1920 has been reduced ten points. In addition to a five point drop at the first of the year.

These changes became effective December 1st.

Your cost of Living

YOUR cost of living should be directly affected. If it is not it is because (1) as the railways have pointed out before, the actual money paid for their services is an almost negligible factor in making prices, and because (2) even the huge sum now cut out of the railways' revenues and amounting to approximately—annually—becomes a very small fraction of a cent when split up among the billions upon billions of small and large articles which constitute the freight traffic of Canada during a year. And because

$25,000,000.00 *

(3) the Court which has the power to control railway rates is not able to direct who is or is not to get the benefit of reductions. In other words, whether these savings in railway charges are passed on to you—or whether they are absorbed in marketing, cannot be controlled either by the railways or the public.

BUT this fact remains: a very great sum of money—enough to build every year a small city, or a Quebec Bridge, or four hundred and fifty of the newest and most powerful locomotives—is now removed from the revenues of the Canadian Railways and should be reflected, at least to some extent, in the family budgets of all Canadians!

WHETHER your railways can continue to function without the revenue thus lost to them, is an experimental problem facing the various managements. It depends largely on whether traffic keeps up or falls off—and whether costs rise or decline. But the managements are attempting the problem cheerfully and with determination to keep Canada's railway service the cheapest, mile for mile, and among the most efficient in the world!

Mr. Balfour Tells a Reporter Why He Never Wed

Though the Disarmament Conference may mean peace or war to the world, neither the delegates nor their companions, the journalists assigned to "cover" the conference, take life too seriously. Among themselves they talk about other things than peace and war. Sometimes, even, they laugh at one another's little ways.

For instance, there is Prince Tokugawa, of the Japanese delegation, who would be Shogun of Japan if there had never been a restoration of the monarchy in 1867. One of the correspondents said to him:—

"Prince, doesn't the hustle of our American reporters seem strange to you?"

"Indeed, yes," answered his excellency. "For instance, at the opening of the conference there the prayer of Rev. Mr. Abernathy. It was given out all nice and printed to reporters in advance. It reached your newspapers before it reached God!"

THE SECRET.

A woman journalist, after considerable strategy, managed to be presented to Mr. Balfour for an interview. She said:—

"Mr. Balfour, why have you never married?"

Mr. Balfour didn't hesitate an instant.

"Because early in life I proposed to have a career of my own," he answered.

"But if you had married, would it have made a great difference to you?"

"It would have made a very great difference," replied Mr. Balfour. "Think of the sweet clutter of things about the house."

The fair interviewer, for once, was nonplussed. She didn't know whether this was a Scots joke or what it was. And in the slight pause Mr. Balfour was able gracefully to say good-bye.

The French delegation is much embarrassed by the persistence of women journalists at the conference. One of them got to the seventh floor of the Willard Hotel, where the French have their offices. You are not supposed to go up to floor without having been announced from the office below. But this lady was a new arrival. She began to bang on a door. It lead into the room of M. Viviani. From another doorway a young French attache poked out his head, disturbed by the tattoo. He rushed up hastily.

THE SOLDIER'S PLEA.

"Young lady, young lady," he said, blushing, "don't you know you are knocking at the bedroom door of a gentleman?"

"Yes," she replied. "I wish to see the gentleman."

The attache stammered and blushed still more while he explained that it wasn't done that way in Paris. But M. Viviani himself appeared in the midst of the explanation, and the lady made the attache serve as interpreter while she got the interview.

A British soldier in uniform, is on constant guard at the British headquarters in the Franklin Hotel. He is supposed to prevent impetuous young journalists dashing into rooms without being announced. Each room has the name of its occupant on the door. A reporter in a hurry went rushing along the corridor after his prey. The soldier tried to stop him. The reporter dodged about, challenging the soldier's authority in America.

"You really can't," pleaded the soldier. "They'll ave me 'ung; they'll ave me 'ung 'igh as 'eaven."

The reported ceased his pursuit. The soldier's plea has now passed into general use at Washington when a final appeal in any matter becomes necessary.
