Old Gardener Writes Concerning the Pear

To the Editor of The Daily Mail:

Dear Sir: We old timers each season are inclined to recall things that happened in our boyhood days. I am now recalling something in our native country (old England) in reference to a pear tree which hung over my father's fence and produced an abundance of ripe, delicious pears. In the month of September we boys used to go early each morning, especially after a windy night, and pick up what fruit had fallen on our side of the fence. This large pear tree had been growing there perhaps a century or two. Perhaps your readers would find it interesting to know a little about the pear. Here in New Brunswick we get line upon fine and precept upon precept in reference to the apple, but very little about the pear as it does not seem like the plum to care much for our soil and climate. I remember forty years or more after being in Fredericton a year or two, going to Cambridge, Mass., to work in a large forty acre nursery. As it was spring I noticed that every homestead had pears growing in their nurseries, and my employer sold his crop of pears for two thousand dollars and those were cheap days compared with the present time.

Now a little about the history of the pear (pyrus communis). The pear like the apple is indigenous to most parts of Europe, but it is not so ancient as the apple. At what period it became ameliorated or removed from its wild state is unknown. In regard to its hardiness and longevity it is greatly superior to the apple or any other of our fruits. There are trees in existence and in bearing condition that are over one hundred years old. The Romans cultivated over thirty six varieties in the days of Pliny, and Parkinson in his Herbal, 1629, speaks of sixty-four sorts in the London nurseries. The history of the cultivated pear has never been written. It was at an early period in Syria, Egypt and Greece, whence it was imported into Italy, France, Germany and Great Britain. Pear culture in France has been carried on to a wonderful extent, thirty-six hundred varieties having been offered from one nursery.

One of my employers in Massachusetts over forty years ago went abroad and purchased a ship load of trees for trial in his nursery at Newton, Masse. The pear although not indigenous to the United States, grows there to the highest perfection both in quality and quantity. The leading horticulturists have made a specialty of its cultivation and have been richly rewarded. The Sectal and several other popular varieties are of American origin. Ontario is also a great producer of the pear, plum, peaches and grape. The grocery store windows display tempting fruits from both Canada and the United States. I noticed that a few days ago a Kings-clear farmer brought a sample of eatable pears to the local market, where they must have been quite a novelty.

Fiancee of Kaiser May Break Spell of Ill Luck

Berlin, Sept. 27—If the wedding of the former Kaiser and Princess Hermine von Schoenaich-Carolath is of happy consequence it will break the spell of sadness which has followed the family of the Reuss Princess for twenty years. Thus runs the gossip in German households where the incidents of the Princess' life are minutely discussed.

Misfortune was the lot of Prince Reuss, her father. His wife died when Princess Hermine was a baby. In the following year the Prince died, thereby extinguishing a long line of regents, and leaving five daughters and a son, who were reared in comparative freedom.

But always there was a shadow over the family in the fact that the only son was insane from the age of 6, when he was the victim of an accident. In vain his father and later the children traveled over Europe seeking specialists who could restore the boy's mind. A special box was constructed for him at the theater to screen him from the public gaze. He is still alive and still insane.

Daughters' Lives Unhappy

Following the death of their father the five daughters married in quick succession. Princess Carolina fell in love with a member of the bourgeoisie, but her relatives, to save her from ignominy, arranged a match with Grand Duke Wilhelm Ernest of Saxe-Weimar. The marriage was unhappy from the first, and the Princess confided to her sisters that she wanted to run away.

Hermine, though only 18, took up the task of peacemaker, effecting a reconciliation one Christmas, but a month later Carolina died. The Grand Duke fell in love with the intercessor and proposed marriage. Hermine consented on one condition—the dismissal of the Duke's majordomo, who was a stickler for etiquette, which the Princess and her court could not tolerate. It was said that the majordomo was an illegitimate son of the Duke's father. At any rate, he refused the Princess' request, and the match fell through.

Wilhelm II. always was fond of the Princess and her mother, the Princess of Schaumburg-Lippe, and several times he urged his sons to marry Hermine or her sisters. Two of the latter, however, married Austrian counts. Hermine's own marriage, which occurred when she was 20, was marred by her husband's illness, which resulted in his resignation from the army, where he was an officer in the Uhlan Guards, and his subsequent death.

Princess Had Five Children

The Princess had five children by that marriage, the eldest of whom is 15. She says she will take her younger children to Doorn after she weds the former Kaiser. She and Wilhelm met before the war, and she is a distant relative of his through her mother. At present she is with the Grand Duchess Luisa von Baden, the eldest living member of the Hohenzollern family, at Bodensee. The wedding is to take place in November.

Retaining at 35 years of age the beauty for which she is celebrated throughout southern Germany, Princess Hermine is tall and of truly regal bearing. Her blond hair has been seen on more than one occasion lately in the Doorn house, where she became engaged to the former Emperor after she had touched him by her condolence following the death of the Kaiserin.

According to the custom of the Hohenzollern line, though it will not be recognized publicly, the Princess, when she becomes the former Kaiser's wife, will be considered also his Kaiserin and so respected by the private court. She is known not only for her beauty but for her lively interest in the arts and outdoor pastimes.

Already Hermine has received her first wedding presents. They are from her future spouse and include a silver service with the Hohenzollern monogram and a bracelet of precious stones.

Tebo, who is only eighteen years old, will be sentenced tomorrow morning by Mr. Justice Ritchie, the presiding judge at today's trial.

The accused pleaded not guilty to the charge that he "did wilfully, maliciously, feloniously and with malice aforethought kill Watters Hutchins." He was defended by W. R. Scott, of St. John. H. L. Dennison, K.C., Kentville, N.S., was crown prosecutor.

A QUEBEC STRIKE

Three Rivers, Que., Sept. 26—Six hundred employees of the Fraser Brace Company, shipbuilders, quit work when the management refused to receive a delegation of men to discuss a demand for a ten per cent increase in wages. The matter will be submitted to a strike vote and in the meantime the spokesmen of the employees announce that they will go back to work if their delegation is received.

TINTED TREES TELL SUMMER GOODBYE

(New York Sun)

Almost before the Flapper has chosen her new autumn hat or the Cake Eater his new derby the trees in the parks and on the outskirts of the city are adopting their new fall coloring—or, at least, some of them are.

Most of the trees wait for the first bite of John W. Frost before singing Tosti's "Good-by." The oaks refuse to turn a hair until the thermometer approaches freezing temperature. So do the hard maple the hickory and the horse chestnut to mention a few trees familiar to city dwellers. Then they turn almost at once into a gorgeous display of purples, scarlets, yellows reds and browns.

The gray squirrel is busy hiding beechnuts and acorns and turning from his summer diet of mushrooms. "Good-by, Summer." You said it Tosti!

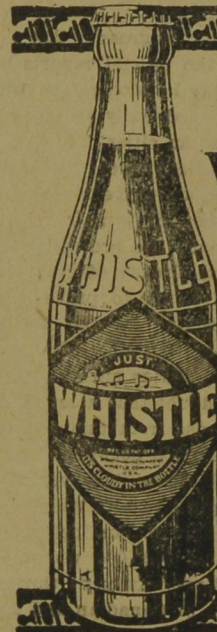

Society is the master and man is the servant, and it is according as society proves a good or bad master, whether he turns out a good or a bad servant.
