Manitoba May Have Coalition Government

Strong Men of the Liberal and Farmer's Party May Get Together — People Getting Tired of Uncertainty — Conservative Party Not a Factor in the Pending Election.

(Toronto Globe.)

Winnipeg, April 21.—There are two main subjects of conversation in this city and throughout the Province: crop prospects and politics. Discussions on the weather and comparisons with other years seem endless. There are no comparisons cited in politics. The situation in Manitoba in that regard is unique in the history of the Province.

In the pending election only two of the four parties are considered to have any chance of coming out on top. It is currently stated that Labor will lose ground, while Conservatives scarcely figure in the election. It is between the Progressives and Liberals, or rather between the Government and the Farmers, that the contest will be fought.

Waiting Return of Norris.

The Farmers are waiting developments. They feel that the next move is up to Premier Norris. There are many speculations as to what that move will be. The Premier will return from Ottawa next Sunday or Monday and definite word as to his program is expected next week.

The Government is faced with three possible courses. It must go to the country as it is and seek to reorganize after the election; reorganize now and fill the vacancies caused by the retirement of three of its members with the strongest men in the party, or form a coalition with the Farmers.

Of the three, it is practically certain that the last will be tried. From reliable sources it is reported that Hon. Mr. Norris will resign, and call on Hon. T. A. Crerar to lend his auspices to the formation of a new Cabinet. It is known that Mr. Crerar has been consulted by friends of the Government. A move of this kind would put it up to him to carry out the advice he is reported to have given.

Way Open For Coalition.

Three of the seven Cabinet Ministers, Hon. Edward Brown, Hon. T. H. Johnson and Hon. Dr. Armstrong, are retiring. If Mr. Norris steps out, this would leave room for four Progressives. A strong coalition might thus be formed.

Robert Forke, present Federal member for Brandon, would be one of the Progressives to enter the Cabinet under this arrangement, and might even be the new Premier. He is said to be one of the ablest farmer politicians of Manitoba. A sort of double shuffle is planned, whereby Mr. Forke would take the seat vacated by Premier Norris, and Premier Norris would transfer his activities to Ottawa through the gateway of the Brandon by-election.

The big drawback to this scheme is the uncertainty of any coalition carrying the rank and file of the Progressive party with it. There is a feeling among the farmers that a coalition should be avoided until after the election, when the standing of the various groups would make it quite clear as to the need of any such arrangement. The Farmers might insist on nominating their own candidates, and opposing all Liberals, even though a mixed Ministry was created.

Taking Cue From "J. J."

Just in the same way as J. J. Morrison in Ontario walks along the straight and narrow path of non-affiliation for fear of alienating the Conservative farmers in the U. F. O. ranks from their new allegiance, the leaders of the U. F. M. fear the effect of a pre-election union with the Liberals. Then, too, the Farmers feel so certain of being in a position to form the next Ministry that they are very loathe to tie themselves up to any other party.

Urban districts here do not dread the advent of an Agrarian Administration, and the Farmers, if they win can count on fairly substantial backing in the cities. There is a movement commencing now to place independent, or, rather, Progressive, candidates in the cities, and with proportional representation in vogue it is practically certain that some of them will be elected.

With the election still some distance away and the alignment for the fight not yet completed, it is hard to forecast with any degree of accuracy the ultimate outcome. The situation is so involved that at present the prophets are, to a great degree, confining their attention to the steps the Government will take before appealing to the country.

Situation is Unique

With the exception of the people in the country, who seem to have their minds made up as to what they intend to do, the mass of the electors are in doubt as to which way to vote. Never before were party lines so shattered. People are sick and tired of the delays and uncertainties of the present situation. Whenever party or whatever group forms the next Government, the electors are anxious that it shall have a clear majority over all other groups in the House.

It is this feeling which militates to a very great extent against the Conservatives. Were it not for the almost absolute certainty that there is not a chance in the world for the Conservatives coming out ahead, there might be a tendency in the cities to give their candidates substantial backing. The trend in the West is toward retrenchment. There is a widespread feeling that the Norris Government has been extravagant. But what is the use of backing the Conservatives on their economy platform if they are to be a very small group in the Legislature?

There is talk of Liberal-Conserva-

HOW HE DRAWS SOME STEADY CUSTOMERS

(New York Sun)

"I have noticed," said the gray haired man waiting in the crowded barber shop, "that the barber at the end never has an empty chair. I come in here regularly and only once in a great while do I get into his chair. He's not an exceptionally good barber, and I couldn't account for his popularity at first. But I watched him for some time, and I think I have learned his method.

"Whenever he gets a man who has never been in his chair before he lathers him in silence. Then when he draws the razor down for the first time he whistles softly in surprise and proceeds with his work. But by the time he gets down around the chin he stops and says, 'You've got one of the toughest beards I ever shaved.' That one sentence is enough to make more than half of those men come back and wait for him the next time they are in the shop. They want some one who understands what a peculiarly sensitive skin they have.

"Yes, sir, Joe must top all the boys in here when it comes to tips. He's never idle. And all because he knows two or three remarks that'll turn the trick for him. Joe's like the doctor who tells all of his patients that they have the strangest and most complicated cases of some simple disease that he's ever encountered in a long practice. Joe and the doctor know what people like."

Miss Gladys Nevers of Kingsclear was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Hammond at the parsonage during Easter.

We are looking forward to the time in the near future when we will have a good road. Mr. Hammond who is doing his best to give us that privilege is busily engaged getting his work in readiness for the summer's operation.

Potatoes are selling at Rosborough Station today for 65 cents per barrel which is very discouraging to our farmers.

Rev. Mr. Middleton, who has had charge of the Presbyterian Church for the past three years has resigned and will leave next month for the Old Country. Mr. Middleton, has made many friends during his stay among us, and his departure will be greatly regretted.
