

National League Clubs Want the Barnstorming Rule Retained in Force

New York, June 13—Retention of the "barnstorming" rule, for the breaking of which Babe Ruth and two other players were suspended was recommended to Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis by seven National League clubs which were represented at a meeting in New York.

"Thorough consideration was given the proposition to change the World Series rule," says an official statement, "which requires both participating teams to disband immediately after the series. It was held that the present rule is a good one and should be retained."

When Ruth, Bob Meusel and Bill Piercy of the New York Americans, the latter now with Boston went on an exhibition tour last October they said they were justified because the rule was "unfair." Some considered it obsolete and others opined that Commissioner Landis was making a strict interpretation of a resurrected law in suspending the three players.

Seven Clubs Represented

During the Winter and Spring a movement to repeal the rule was begun. Little public argument was made against it, and most fans believed that it would be erased from the books at league meetings this year today's decision coming as a distinct surprise. Representatives of all but the Pittsburgh club attended the meeting. The statement did not say whether the action was unanimous. Pres. John A. Heydler who presided was appointed a committee of one to carry out the league's plans in obtaining a site and erecting a fitting memorial in memory of the late Capt. Adrian C. Anson who died in Chicago this Spring Anson is recognized as the "daddy of baseball."

There were other mournful touches to today's session. The league voted a monthly pension to Cal A. McVey one of the original Cincinnati "Reds" who played on the big four with Spalding, White and Barnes. McVey had suffered ill-fortune "and is in need" the statement says. Pres Heydler and Barney Dreyfuss owner of the Pittsburgh club were appointed to investigate the circumstances of the family of the late "Bill" Rhines who wore both a Rer and Pirate uniform.

The seven clubs were represented, as follows: Boston, George W. Grant; Brooklyn, Charles H. Ebbets; Chicago, William L. Veeck; Cincinnati, August Herrmann and Louis Widrig; New York, John J. McGraw; Philadelphia, William F. Baker; St. Louis, Sam Breadon.

FIRST WOMAN OWNER

Wife of James Dunn Now Owner Of Cleveland Club.

Cleveland, June 13—All Cleveland baseball fans were mourning the death of James C. Dunn president of the Cleveland baseball club who because of his disposition had won the appellation of "Sunny Jim."

Upon receipt of the news of his death at Chicago the game between Cleveland and Washington was postponed and Mayor Fred Kohler ordered the flag on City Hall was flown at half-staff.

No club owner was more highly esteemed by his players than Mr. Dunn. It was a pleasure for him to mingle with his men and the athletes found his company to be pleasantly inspiring.

Les Nuamaker and Jack Graney, veteran players and Clay Folger head of the police force at Dunn Field were delegated to represent the club at the funeral.

It is believed that Mrs. Dunn will maintain her financial interest in the baseball club. Should she decide to do this she will be the first woman club owner in the American League.

In this event it is believed that Tris Speaker, manager of the Indians or Tom Walsh, of Davenport, Ia, vice president will be named president of the club.

Mr. Dunn was 56 years old and is survived by his wife.

STREET VENDOR OF WATCHES SETS A RECORD

(New York Sun)

What must have been undoubtedly the best business opportunity of the last twelvemonth ended abruptly this morning when Robert Tafury was chased by Policeman Friedman.

It must have been a splendid bargain, because Mr. Tafury said it was, and why should he say it was if it was not? They were watches at fifteen cents apiece. Think of it. And he was selling them at Park Row and Beekman street, which is, as every one knows, the very heart of the section where the wealthiest class of newspaper men may be found.

Newspaper men—like oh, one could name a dozen; nay, a gross—think nothing of paying $50, $100, $200, $500 and even $1,000 for a watch. And here was Robert Tafury selling watches for 15 cents! One should say it was a rattling good bargain.

And you didn't even have to go into a store to buy them. You didn't have to pay the overhead of store rent, upkeep, depreciation and clerk hire. Mr. Tafury was selling the watches right from a satchel on the curb, and all the purchaser had to pay was the overhead on Mr. Tafury's hat. He himself admitted that he was selling the watches at much less than cost and was doing it merely as a work of philanthropy.

Then Policeman Friedman came down like the Assyrian who came down like a wolf on the fold.

Mr. Tafury closed his suitcase and disappeared in exactly .0945 pat, thus beating by a second the record for closing suitcases and disappearing established in 1914 by Berkowitz, '16, who closed his suitcase and disappeared in .0946 when Policeman Flaherty of the Old Slip station came down on him while he was selling his new patent suspenders that needed no buttons or pants.

In addition, Mr. Tafury's record equaled the world's record for jumping out rear windows on the sudden and unexpected reappearance of husbands. This was made in 1902 by Smith, now dead. Dead ever since, in fact.

On the disappearance of Mr. Tafury Policeman Friedman gave chase and brandished his revolver. This was unclubby on Policeman Friedman's part. There was nothing for Mr. Tafury to do but stop. However, when Policeman Friedman caught up with him Mr. Tafury did not have his suitcase full of watches. That is the mystery of the whole affair. Where did the suitcase go?

Mr. Friedman took Mr. Tafury to the Fifth Precinct and showed him to Capt. Roderhen, who asked Mr. Tafury where he lived and received the following answer: "36 North Chambers street."

Mr. Tafury was admitted to bail pending an appearance in court to explain why he was selling watches on the sidewalk.

SORES SPREAD ALL OVER FACES AND BODIES

Mrs. Howard Houlette, Waskatenau the benefit we have received by using your valuable medicine Burdock Blood Bitters.

My children started to break out on their faces in small white pimples which kept getting larger each day. Pus would form under the scabs and they would come off, and each time the sores would be larger; some were as large as a twenty-five cent piece, and would spread all over their bodies. I was nearly in despair and sent to the village for a bottle of good blood medicine. The druggist sent me a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters which I commenced giving them at once.

In about ten days I saw an improvement and they grew steadily better each day, and in one month the sores had all disappeared.

All blood and skin diseases are caused by bad blood, and to get pure and keep it pure you must remove every trace of the impure and morbid matter from the system by a blood cleansing medicine such as

The Party Leaders Took Part in Budget Debate

Hon. Mr. Crerar Does Not Like the Budget on the Drayton Amendment—His Amendment Was Ruled Out by the Speaker—Many Progressives Would Like to Vote for the Budget.

(Special Correspondence)

Ottawa, June 9—The Debate would up, if not in a blaze of glory, at least in a flood of words. The three leaders had spoken in the first two days of the week but there were still some of their followers who figured there was something to be said and on behalf of their constituents. Though every argument that could be made for or against the Budget had already been made since, the back-benchers had to have their say, and they said it.

The speeches of the three leaders were interesting. Mr. Crerar liked neither the Budget nor the Drayton amendment to it, and in order to find a middle course, he moved a sub-amendment which declared against continuance of the principle of protection. Subsequently this was ruled out of order by the speaker who had spent some hours conning the precedents to cover the case, and who one ruled, with many of his predecessors, that there would be only one amendment to a motion to go into either committee of supply or committee of ways and means. Mr. Crerar was peeved at the outcome naturally, and appealed to the House. Only his own followers voted for him in the appeal and it went down to defeat by a majority of 57.

Complexity of Opinion

The Progressive party at the moment presents an interesting complexity of opinion. There are many of its members who would like to vote for the Budget; none who will vote for Drayton amendment, and not a few who are between the devil and the deep sea since their own attempted amendment was disallowed. In private conversation many of them admit that they haven't anything better in their mind than Mr. Fielding has laid before them; they have their objections to the Budget but they admit that they could do no better. If there were a few changes, which, by the way, they might be able to make while in committee on the resolutions, they could accept it and they would like to. On the other hand, a group, chiefly composed of the Alberta twelve apostles, will vote against the Budget on the ground that it is not what they expected and not what they wanted.

May Be a Split

Writing in advance of the vote being taken, one would be very strongly tempted to say that the Progressive party will divide. Some have openly declared that they cannot see through Mr. Crerar's free trade glasses and they think that this Budget is a step in the right direction. None of them but must admit that the country needs revenue, and while there is talk of a tax on vacant lands to replace the other taxes, none of the responsible members of the party have urged it upon the government very strongly.

Mr. Crerar was not in particularly good form for his speech. Something was lacking when he got up. It was evident that he did not want to smite the government hip and thigh and that he was quite averse to acceptance of the Drayton amendment. He attacked the budget, however, on the grounds that it was a continuance of Protection. Mr. King, when his turn came, denied absolutely that such was the case. He pointed to the difficulties facing every section of the country and every class of Canadians.

Could the government wisely have gone further than it did? he asked the House. Every step which had been made had been away from protection. The Finance Minister had lowered the duties on the implements of production in the basic industries and had done his best to make the burden of taxation fall less lightly upon the poor and the more heavily on the richer classes. The charge that this was a Protectionist budget was entirely unfounded.

In Glass Houses

The Prime Minister's contribution was short but meaty. Instead of wasting hours of the time of the House in flights of oratory, Rt. Hon. Mr. King confined his remarks to the matter in hand, except for pointing out the Conservatives, who were loudly proclaiming breaches of faith, that they were in the position of people who lived in glass houses and therefore could not afford to throw stones.

The Leader of the Opposition was typically Meigheneseque in his delivery and his material. In the main his speech which continued for over two hours, was a condemnation of the government for, as he alleged, having broken faith with the people and also of condemnation for the Progressives on the charge that they had kept the government in office. The Progressives, he declared, were going home empty-handed; they had nothing they wanted.

All that they could tell their constituents when they got home was that they had been compelled to forego the Crow's Nest Pass agreement; had perhaps received an emasculated Wheat Board; had failed to bring about either a reduction in the cost of living or a substantial reduction in the duties on the things which they were pledged to have placed on the free list. Mr. Meighen's speech was full of politics and vitriol. At its close one of his warm supporters ventured the opinion that it was a wonderful political speech, but entirely misjudged as to both time and place in its delivery. As for its effect on the House or the country, he thought it would be nil.

With the Budget Debate out of the way the House will turn its attention to putting through the resolutions and getting everything in shape for the grand finale. There are many matters to be dealt with, such as the Wheat Board, Re-establishment, and the railway rates. It is hoped to have most of them out of the way and the deans cleared for action by about two weeks. The end should be in sight by June 20th at least; for with the arrival of the hot weather the members are anxious to shake the dust of Ottawa from their shoes and get back amongst the cows and chickens on whatever form of outdoor life they favor during the summer months.

Interest in the budget has changed to impending modifications in the taxation proposals. Indication that changes are at hand was given by the Prime Minister.

Some Modifications

"The Minister of Finance" he observed when the House was discussing when the vote should be taken—"will doubtless wish to make a statement to the House in the light of discussion here and of representations made to him, and may possibly suggest some modifications in the proposals now before the House."

Of the nature of the "Modifications" Mr. King gave no inkling, although changes in the proposed stamp tax on checks are generally thought to be included.

Sir Lomer Gouin's speech is regarded as of particular importance in its possible bearing on the coming crucial division on the main budget motion.

"With the Liberal party," he heaved, "the main concern respecting the tariff is not free trade or protection. 'It is a revenue'. He agreed that agriculture was the basic industry, but emphasized the need of manufactures.

"Abolish the tariff," he queried. "No government could think of it, and it could not do it if it tried." There had been talk of two million people having left Canada.

"I may be wrong," commented Sir Lomer Gouin, "but in my opinion it we had in this country more manufactures we should have kept with us many of those who left to go elsewhere.
