

CLARK'S

COOKED CORNED BEEF

Ladies—How simple!

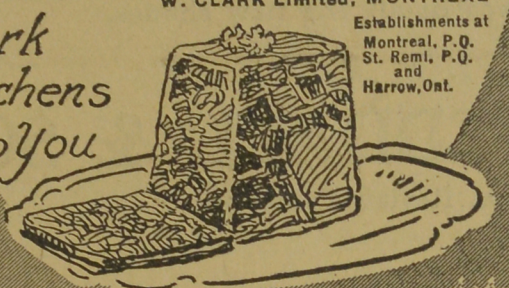

Instead of buying a joint of corned beef, with much bone and gristly fat, buy a tin of Clark's Cooked Corned Beef. Open and serve. Note the quality of the beef—its flavor, the absence of waste—and remember that despite the work you save, this delicious Clark's Cooked Corned Beef costs no more per serving than the doubtful, fuel-using kind.

Let the Clark Kitchens help you.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Relieved Her of Headaches

Headache seems to be habitual with many people, and some, if any, are seldom free from it, suffering continually, and wondering why they can get no relief.

In all cases of headache the treatment should be directed to the removal of the cause, and with the cause removed the headaches will vanish.

It is impossible to find a better remedy for headaches of every description than can equal B. B. B., acting as it does on every organ of the system.

Mrs. Douglas Rosborough, 280 McKenzie St., Sarnia, Ont., writes:—"Having suffered from severe headaches for a considerable length of time I decided to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and found that it helped me wonderfully. It relieved the headaches and I noticed a decided improvement in my health."

Burdock Blood Bitters is a remedy that has been on the market for the past forty-four years, so you don't experiment with some new and untried medicine. It is put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto.

LITTLE STORIES OF THE TOWN

Can Buy Even Drugs.

An observant citizen says that a few years ago drug stores sold only drugs, now they sell everything. Last week he saw a drug store window full of oranges and lemons, and another with ladies hair nets.

Worries of the Elders.

"When I was a youngster" said a gray haired lady as she looked at the mud-bespattered satin slippers of a girl of 17. "Wet feet were something to be avoided. They meant colds, maybe pneumonia. I wonder if our doctors and fathers and our elders generally were wrong. Why today girls take no more care to keep their feet dry than they do to preserve their natural complexion. What kind of mothers will these satin slippared creatures make and what kind of children will they bring into the world?"

ALLAYING SUSPICION.

Hey—Why do you insist on buying that specific brand of perfume for your wife. Does she prefer it?

Dey—No, but it's the kind my stenographer uses.

SPIRITUAL.

Willis—My wife professes the Methodist faith.

Gills—And to what church do you pretend!

THE PRINCE OF WALES VISITED VIMY RIDGE

(By Dominion News Service)

London, May 28—One of the most impressive moments of the recent visit of the Prince of Wales to the battlefields of Belgium and France was when he stood with bared head before the Canadian Memorial at Vimy Ridge. He had just laid a beautiful wreath at the foot of the monument and it was obvious to all the observers that he was deeply moved. He stood for many moments in deep thought and then without a word to his companions turned and walked back to his waiting car. Although he travelled incognito he was recognized in the smallest estaminets and was received with enthusiasm. At Little he dined in the public restaurants, and many of the French visitors could scarcely believe that the slender figure in grey joking with friends in the lounge was the heir to the British throne.

The next morning he motored to Ypres through Ploegstreet and Mesines. He wanted to see again the part of the line where he spent most of his time, and it was at "Hyde Park Corner," that well-remembered bend in the famous road, that the first stop was made. Gardeners who had known that quarter when death shrieked down upon it were now tending the paths between the beds of marigolds in the cemeteries where so many sons of the Empire rest. The Prince got out of his car and gazed around the cemetery. "You have made it very lovely," he said to the gardener who stood at attention. "It was the middle of hell when we were last here together, Sir," the gardener replied.

At Ploegstreet there is an old woman who was deeply disappointed because she missed seeing the Prince. Many of those who fought in that area will remember her, for no matter how severe the shelling she resisted stubbornly all efforts to remove her far from the place where once had stood a cottage that had been her home. After the Armistice she took possession of an old dugout that had been constructed on the site of the cottage. Here she lives still with her uncle and an orphan child. She makes a meagre living by supplying coffee to visitors to her queer habitation. In a mixture of French and English she bids them welcome and is particularly solicitous for the comfort of those who are visiting the graves of loved ones in the neighborhood. She is very proud of her underground kitchen and bedroom—a queer dark place like a witch's cavern where rats play undisturbed. Rosaries hang on the wall and a picture of the Madonna is above the stove. When she learned that she had missed the Prince, for whom she had been watching all morning, she was sorrowful, until a thought struck her. "Tomorrow," she said, "begins the month of the devotion to Our Lady. I will light a candle for the Prince."

And so from the dugout on a Belgian-French frontier the prayers of an old woman who long ago saw the Prince in khaki will follow him.

CARNEGIE FOUNDATION MAKES REPORT

The trades today there are numberless openings in which the remuneration is high and which offer a life of satisfaction and usefulness, yet so great is the emphasis on the occupation to be reached only through high school and college, that the opportunities in such trades are depreciated and the facilities for training the youth of the country adequately are meagre. By reason of this belief.....the schools are overrun by a flood of pupils many of whom would never have been admitted under reasonable conditions.....What is still more serious there will be turned each year from the schools an increasing number of youth whose education has been superficial, insincere and ill-adapted to an earnest and vigorous career.

Overcrowding

This overcrowding of the schools due to a false conception on the part of the public and to a timid attitude on the part of the school authorities is closely related to a second cause which has perhaps done more to increase the cost of public education than any one other factor, and this is the so-called "enrichment" of the curriculum. Twenty years ago the curriculum of the high school and of the college was comparatively simple but so great has been the expansion of the curriculum in this interval that the high school today represents a difference conception of what a school is for and what it can do for society. This is the crux of the whole question as to the cost of education. If the high school curriculum is to cover all fields of knowledge and of activity, including in its scope not only the elementary training of the students in their own language and in the fundamental facts of their own history, but also all divisions of science and of art; and if it is to offer, not only a moderate grounding in knowledge, but a technical training as well, then there is no limit to the expense which a community may be called upon to under go in order to satisfy the ambitions of those who advocate this conception of the high school. The responsibility for this movement lies mainly with the teachers themselves.

In Cycling Accident.

LeBaron Molloy was shaken up and scotched to some extent when he was thrown from his motor cycle on Woodstock Road Sunday afternoon. The accident was due to too great speed.

Piles

QUICKLY BANISHED

"I suffered years of agony through blind itching piles," says Mrs. W. Hughes, of Hochelaga St., Montreal. "Pain, loss of strength, complete misery, was my daily lot until I came across Zam-Buk. I know now that there is nothing on this earth to equal this grand herbal healer. Since Zam-Buk lifted me from misery my earnest wish is that it will be made known to all other piles sufferers."

Moves Pain Like Magic!

Words can never fully describe the grateful relief which herbal Zam-Buk brings. With it there is instant allaying of burning pain and itching; swollen, inflamed parts are soothed and healed, causing the piles to gradually but completely disappear. Zam-Buk is equally splendid in eczema, bad legs, scalp disease, poisoned wounds, burns, scalds, etc. 50c. box, all dealers.
