HOW TO PAY THE DOCTOR.

The way we pay our physicians is all wrong. We pay them for healing us when we are ill. We should pay them to keep us well.

President Samuel M. Vauclain of the Baldwin locomotive works, in Philadelphia, entered into a contract with a physician five years ago. The physician was to guarantee him good health for ten years. Mr. Vauclain was to follow the other's directions implicitly as to the care of his body. The fee was gradually to be increased as the patient grew older and more difficult to keep in repair. When the patient was sick, there would be a deduction from the fee.

That was logical. Also it has worked well. Mr. Vauclain reports he has enjoyed practically perfect health for the past five years.

Similar arrangements have been entered into between other physicians and their patients. Usually the results to the patient are excellent. He is examined often enough to detect any malady in its early stages. If the patient becomes aware that he is coming down with something, he consults his physician immediately instead of waiting for it to become serious.

The only difficulty is—the patient forgets to give the doctor credit. Continued good health makes him feel that medical services are unnecessary. When the contract runs out, he declines to renew it. The next year he pays nothing for health—but possibly much for sickness.

VINDICATION OF LAUGHTER.

After four years of patient study, Dr. Thorek, surgeon-in-chief of the American Hospital of Chicago, has come to the conclusion that there is nothing in the theory that elderly human beings can be restored to their youth by the transplantation of monkey glands. He believes, for one thing, that the notion is fallacious. He is convinced, for another, that some of the surgery connected with transplantation is "positively injurious." Dr. Thorek vindicates the laughter of the masses who have refused to take monkey gland operations seriously. Sometimes the instincts of normal human beings are far wiser than the elaborate assumptions and conjectures of science.

The U. N. B. students who participated in the joint debate with the Oxford University debating team here last night, did not get the decision, but they certainly made a magnificent showing against the seasoned Oxonians and their fellow students should be proud of them.

FREDERICTON ROTARY CLUB'S ANNUAL DINNER

the benefit of the protection given to the salmon on the Tobique.

The Atlantic Salmon.

In New Brunswick they had all that remained of the pure Atlantic salmon. The salmon of the Pacific coast were coarse and could not compare with the fine scaled and fine grained fish which inhabited the Bay of Fundy. The salmon on the Pacific coast would not take a fly and were only fit for canning purposes. He regretted that two years ago the Dominion government had brought 200,000 salmon eggs from British Columbia for the fish hatchery at Grand Falls. It was stated that they were to be used to stock a river for experimental purposes, but this plan was abandoned and they were released in the Tobique River. They were not going to improve a fish which is now undoubtedly the best in the world. In his early days with the Tobique Salmon Club net fishing in non-tidal waters was not permitted. Later on residents of the St. John Valley above Fredericton were granted the privilege of catching fish every second fortnight for their own use. He had no objection to net fishing if done legally, and the fish were given a reasonable chance to get to the headwaters. The fishery laws should be framed to do the greatest good to the greatest number. Although the season for fishing had been extended this year the members of the Tobique Salmon Club did no fishing after the 15th of August. He knew that there were people who would kill the fish if they were not protected and for that reason the wardens were kept on until the fish returned to the sea.

An Important Industry.

The speaker quoted statistics showing the value of the fisheries of Canada to be $42,000,000 a year, of which $12,500,000 represented the value of the salmon. No figures were available to show the cash value of the salmon catch of the Bay of Fundy, but he felt sure that it would run up to many thousands of dollars. Last year the New Brunswick government had collected a revenue of $31,700 from the sale of fishing licenses and leases, and had not expended a single dollar for the protection of the fish. He could say without fear of successful contradiction that there was not a river in Canada where salmon experienced more difficulty in reaching the spawning beds than the St. John. While out to sea salmon killed their own bait and could not be caught like cod or haddock, but the moment they reached fresh water they became the prey of birds, eels and other enemies. The Tobique River afforded the only spawning grounds for the Atlantic salmon. They could not go above Grand Falls and the Aroostook River was dammed at its mouth. It was of great importance to the people of New Brunswick that this valuable game fish should be protected and conserved for future generations.

President VanDine in a few graceful words thanked Messrs. Tufts and Allen for the very interesting addresses.

Several films depicting hunting scenes and migratory birds were shown on the screen and were much enjoyed. The necessary paraphernalia for showing the films was loaned by Mr. Witter Fenety of the Gaiety Theatre.

A handsome and appropriate menu card specially prepared for the occasion was distributed to the members and guests as souvenirs.

The pleasant gathering broke up at nine o'clock with the singing of the National Anthem.
