

The Skull of Delorme is Exhibited

MEDICO EXPERT ON THE STAND

Explains Nature of Wound Which Caused Death of Raoul Delorme.

Montreal, June 29—Further identification of exhibits marked the continuation this afternoon of the trial of Rev. Father Delorme charged with the murder of his half-brother, Raoul. Postman Champagne identified the box containing Raoul's watch as the same parcel he had delivered to Chief Lorrain's home in February, 1922, while Detective Rioux identified a quilt which he said he found in the drawer of a bureau in Florence Delorme's room.

Dr. McTaggart, medico-expert attached to the court, was recalled and examined by Crown Prosecutor Calder. He stated he had received the body of Raoul Delorme recently and made an examination of the head and face. He had dissected a part of the jawbone and produced from his pocket a small blue envelope from which he took the jawbones of Raoul Delorme, the two parts fitting together. The jury craned forward to look at it while the accused priest who was seated in the half shadow in the farther corner of the dock made no indication that he knew part of his half-brother's skull was being shown in court.

Dr. McTaggart explained the nature of the wound to the jury with the aid of the jaw bones. He pointed out that no injury had been caused by the bullet to the base of the skull or the other side of the jaw. Asked if he had put a probe or anything else in the wound to show the general direction, the doctor said it could not be seen at the present time as all the face had been eaten off by the different larvae and other things. He then told how the third bullet had been found. It was located in the eighth vertebrae on the left side. This bullet was shown to the jury. It was also fitted into the wound in the jawbone and was seen to be slightly smaller than the cavity made by the bullet. This, said Dr. McTaggart, was a usual characteristic of bullet wounds. So far as he could judge visually, the bullet was apparently of the same calibre as the other bullets found. A thorough search was made for other bullets as far down the body as the angle of the shoulder blades, but nothing was found and the doctor was convinced that there was no bullet below this point.

Speeches Attacking Britain Made on Liner Leviathan

(Special to the Mail)

London, June 30—Speeches attacking Great Britain (in terms which are unfit to print) were delivered at gatherings aboard the shipping board liner, Leviathan, during her trial trip, according to a dispatch to the New York correspondent of the London Daily Mail, published today. Lasker, then chairman of the shipping board, who was the official post, listened with every appearance of approval to a parade of abuse of everything British from W. F. Gibbs, naval architect who re-conditioned the Leviathan, (the dispatch said) the Daily Mail quoted Gibbs as saying that he had learned "all the crooked tricks" of British steamship owners and America was going to sweep the British off the seas.

Wholesale Men Praise The Premier

Convention Gives Thanks for Eloquent Address of Welcome.

St. Andrews, N. B., June 29—The convention of the Canadian Wholesale Association at St. Andrews concluded last night and adjourned. The place for holding the convention next year was left to the new executive to decide. The attendance was large, more than 200 delegates registering, and all were delighted with St. Andrews-by-the-Sea and the hospitality of the New Brunswick whole sale grocers. Among the resolutions adopted were the following:

Resolved, That the thanks of the convention be extended to Hon. P. J. Veniot, Premier of New Brunswick for his instructive and eloquent address outlining as he did the position of the Maritime Provinces in our confederacy. He has made us realize the fairness of some of the claims of these provinces and has convinced us of the advisability of giving favorable consideration to the claim that owing to changed conditions it would appear that the British North America Act does not assure to the Maritime Provinces the position which these provinces believe it was the intention of the Fathers of Confederation in which they should be placed in our confederacy. This convention is of the opinion that it would be in the best interest of Canada as a whole that the request of the Maritime Provinces for revision of the Act of Confederation be given favorable consideration. New Brunswick may well be proud of having as Premier a man who can so ably represent both her French and English people and who has demonstrated to this convention the possibility of the complete accomplishment of that high ideal the solid union of the people of the two great races in Canada. Resolutions of appreciation of the kindness extended to the delegates by the Maritime Wholesale Grocers, the C. P. R. Hotel Algonquin; Arthur Ganong who entertained the ladies to a drive to St. Stephen and also presented boxes of chocolates to all the delegates.

Had a Heavy Loss

Mr. Charles Cremin of this city, whose sporting camps on the headwaters of the Nepisiguit River were destroyed recently by forest fires, has arrived home. He says that while he lost fifteen of his largest camps, all well equipped and stocked with provisions, eight survived the flames and these will enable him to carry on. He now has two American parties in the woods, and has more booked for the summer and autumn months. It is his intention to build several camps this season and have them ready for the autumn business. While Mr. Cremin has met with a severe loss he is not in the least discouraged.

Situation Between the Vatican and French Government is Tense

Reception to the Vatican at the French Embassy at Rome Planned for July 3rd. Has Been Postposed Indefinitely—A Royal Engagement to Be Announced Soon in England.

(Special to the Mail)

Rome, June 30—A tense situation has arisen between the Vatican and the French Government over the Pope's recent letter with regard to French occupation of the Ruhr. Announcement today that a reception planned to be held at the French embassy to the Vatican July 3 has been postponed indefinitely, has increased the tension of the last twenty four hours and was given significant political interpretation.

Announcement of postponement of the scheduled resolution followed action of the leaders in the French Senate Friday, repudiating suggestions of the Pontif.

While a spokesman at the Vatican let it be known that the Pope believes his letter was misinterpreted in French circles, there is a strong feeling that efforts to remedy the situation were not received in the spirit in which they were made.

Sun Back in Germany Once More

Growth Endangered by a Long Gloom; New Russian Famine Seen

Berlin, Germany, June 30—The sun returned to Germany to-day. He had been seen in Berlin only thirteen times in the last eighty-six days and had made only two or three fleeting visits in other parts of northern Europe. Prof. Archenholtz head of the reptow observatory near Berlin announces that the heat wave which has made life miserable for residents of the United States is headed for Europe and will arrive in about three weeks. Meantime Germany's crops are endangered on account of sunshine. In Russia the crops are suffering because of too much moisture and the situation is even more critical than it was two years ago when the Samara famine caused the death of thousands of peasants.

The reappearance of the sun has encouraged the German people. Only a few days ago the authorities gave the people permission to use steam heat again, the plants having been shut down since April 1 in order to preserve the coal supply.

The schools are closing for the summer vacation ten days ahead of time on account of the chilly atmosphere, which has proved detrimental to the health of the pupils.

A Strike of Farm Labor In Ireland

A WAVE OF DISTRUSTION

The Crops Are being Destroyed; Homes Burned In Some Districts.

Dublin, Ireland, June 30—The strike of the agricultural laborers in Waterford is growing in violence and its extension throughout the province of Munster is feared. Beginning as an ordinary wage dispute the strike has developed into an attack on property. The farmers call it bolshevism. Houses are burned, growing crops are destroyed and men attempting to work the land are threatened.

The farmers' union is well organized and is putting up a stiff fight against the Transport Workers' union, the great unskilled labor organization with which the farm laborers have allied themselves. James Larin, founder of this organization asserts that notwithstanding the interruption of his nine years in the United States, he still is its secretary. He has quarreled with many of those who have kept the movement going in his absence, but neither he nor his rivals seem to have any control in Waterford.

Larkin's action and speeches are complicating Irish politics. By dividing the labor forces he is weakening labor's electoral strength. He is a pronounced republican, very hostile to the government and eulogistic of De Valera, but he sees that the refusal of the republicans to surrender their arms has smoothed the path of the government and he has urged a general surrender.

He does not want a seat in the dail. He has declared for a proletariat governing the country from outside the dail. His chief difficulty is with his old labor colleagues who believe in parliamentary methods. When it was suggested that he should call a general strike of those who in the past gave Ireland some completely workless days Larkin said:

"I never move any machinery until I know that it can be operated. We now have a labor movement that is rotten at heart. Not only is the heart rotten, but the limbs are absolutely decrepit."

If strikes are evidence of labor's vitality, it has never been more active in Ireland than now. Few branches of Irish business have long escaped them. Dublin is still without theatres or cinemas and at the port strikes continuously dislocate trade between Great Britain and Ireland.

No Travel Permits Until After July 3

The Advisory Board of the Department of Lands and Mines after considering the numerous requests made by intending trout anglers and others who wished to spend this week and the holiday Monday in the woods and on the streams, decided to continue the prohibition of travel-permits for the woods until after July 3rd. This action was taken because it was considered that the risk of letting thousands of people into the woods for several days was too great from the viewpoint of fire risk. Rains have been quite general all over the province but it is thought to be better to be perfectly sure, because of the heavy fire-loss in forests which already has occurred.
