SECRETS OF THE PAST ARE DISCLOSED IN ANCIENT TOMB FOUND IN EGYPT

Three thousand five hundred years ago King Tutankh-Amen was Lord of Egypt, then one of the richest and most powerful nations of history. Joshua was still leading the Israelites; Rome had not been founded, and our own country was largely a waste of forest and swamp, inhabited by Indians, who decorated their bodies with weird painted designs.

But Egypt was a civilized country, whose mighty buildings were the wonder of the world. Her artists were doing work that cannot be bettered today, and her jewellers were skilled in dealing with precious stones and metal.

Tutankh-Amen, one of her greatest kings, was laid to rest with extraordinary pomp. From accounts we have of the funeral we know that more than $15,000,000 worth of treasures was buried with him.

His tomb has now been found, and most wonderful of all, it has never been interfered with since the day when his successor's Great Chamberlain placed his seals upon its doors.

Other royal tombs have been found in plenty, but all of them had been rifled by the marauding bands of Arabs who robbed and looted during Egypt's later years.

Tutankh-Amen's tomb owes its preservation to a rather curious circumstance. Some years after Tutankh-Amen's death another Pharaoh died, and his tomb was built close by in the Valley of Kings. The workmen engaged, upon it did not know the position of Tutankh-Amen's resting place and as luck would have it they dumped the earth from their excavations right on top of its entrance, burying it so completely that it has lain hidden for more than thirty centuries. It was by the merest chance that Lord Carnarvon's party came across it.

They were examining a neighboring tomb when suddenly they came upon a sealed door. A hole was made in the masonry and one of the party scrambled through with a candle. Beyond was another door bearing the same seals, and within that the most wondrous chamber that explorers have ever discovered.

It was the ante-chamber to the tomb itself, its great doors guarded by two life-sized statues of the king himself, shod with slippers of the purest gold. In it were all kinds of amazing relics, lying just as the mourners had left them before the doors were closed and sealed. Lamps, candelabra, statues, vases, and wands of office were there, all of the finest workmanship and many of them encrusted with tiny, beautifully cut gems.

So perfect was the craftsmanship of the jewellers who made them that the handles of some of the wands bear more than a hundred little stones to each square inch.

Nothing could be touched, for things that have lain so long must be specially treated with chemicals before they can be handled. You can imagine how the searchers longed to go through the inner door into the tomb where treasures untold lie; but they could not do so until they had all the apparatus necessary for dealing with its wonderful contents.

The tomb has been opened. The Egyptians believed that a dead man took to the other world all that was buried with him. They therefore

MAY SELL SPACE FOR ADVERTISING

London, June 16—Chill penury may repress many a noble rage, but in the case of the heads of the various government departments of England, it has brought forth a decided show of genius in the art of raising and saving money. It is now proposed by the chancellor of the exchequer to sell space on income tax forms and other government papers for advertising purposes.

It is claimed that about $2,500,000 can be raised in this manner.

LIQUID GOODS DISPLACES FRUIT AS GIFTS

Paris, June 14—The "drying up" of the trans-Atlantic liners has revolutionized the selection of bon voyage gifts to departing friends. Baskets of fruit formerly went to departing steamship passengers. Today the basewines, champagnes and brandies, keels are filled with an assortment of with occasionally a cocktail shaker tucked in one corner. A number of the Parisian wineshops have caught the idea of making a specialty of assembling the proper outfit of a week's drinkables.

BERNHARDT EFFECTS SOLD

Paris, June 15—The final day of the first sale of Sarah Bernhardt's effects realized 127,895 francs, a total of $207,070 francs for the three days.

The great canopied bed, on which the famous actress died, was withdrawn from the sale. The highest-priced lot, consisting of bas reliefs and sacred objects sculptured in wood brought 11,000 francs. A rug made from the skin of an antelope killed by Mme. Bernhardt while hunting with the late Czar, near Moscow, brought 287 francs.

placed in his tomb everything he had needed during life. Food, clothing, hunting gear, jewellery, household furniture, musical instruments—in fact, every necessity and every luxury were buried with the dead.

Besides providing one of the most wondrous collections of treasure the world has ever seen, the tomb will also show us exactly how the Egyptians lived in the far-off days of Tutankh-Amen.

SPECIAL ATTRACTION AT GAIETY THEATRE

"Brass" is the photoplay at The Gaiety Monday and Tuesday with a star cast.

"Brass" is a screen adaptation of the novel by Charles G. Norris. It has as its subject a theme of universal appeal—marriage. Here is interest for the flapper, who idly wonders about the men of her dreams—interest for the wife, who may be thinking of divorce—interest for the divorcee and also interest for "the other woman." The scenarioist, though he has not adhered very closely to the novel, has produced an engrossing picture.

The most salient point about the entire film is, in our opinion, the notable work done by the two members of the cast. Monte Blue in the role of the husband and Irene Rich as the "other woman," play their respective parts with great intelligence and feeling, and their work is so far above the average that it seems to us their names should be blazing in lights if that is the reward of real merit.

In fact, the entire play has been cast with a prodigal hand. Such a gifted actor as Frank Keenan is seen in a comparatively small part, with which he does a fine bit of work. Marie Prevost also distinguishes herself as the wife by giving a clever performance, and Harry Myers in a comedy role is simply delightful. So much for the players.

Cyril Chadwick, Helen Ferguson, Miss Dupont and Pat O'Malley play their roles of lesser importance in fine style.

The picture has been excellently directed and contains many small touches which help to make it quite out of the ordinary. The settings are good and the entire production is worthy of praise.
