A GREAT LAVA STREAM

FROM MOUNT ETNA IS

ADVANCING INEXORABLY

Catania, June 19—The great lava stream from Mount Etna bearing in its flow huge masses of earth and volcanic stone, is advancing inexorably and has already reached the outskirts of the town of Linguaglossa. Green fields, orange groves and vineyards have been swallowed up, and for miles around the atmosphere is suffocating with volcanic smoke and ashes which is covering the lovely countryside like a pall.

Several of the smaller houses in Linguaglossa have been shaken down by the frequent earth shocks, and the once smiling little town, which until the last, it was thought, might be spared, is directly in the line of lava and doubtless doomed to destruction.

The molten stream is traveling about forty yards an hour, and therefore, unless some miracle happens, Linguaglossa will go under during the night. Confronting it is a lava bed 800 yards wide and nearly thirty feet deep.

Smaller torrents of lava, diverted from the central stream, threaten the villages of Randazzo and Bronte from which so many tourists make the ascent of Etna, Francavilla, Castiglione, Giardini and Fiume Freddo.

The work of clearing the threatened towns is being carried on with the greatest energy and admirable organization. Discipline is necessary to induce the terrified inhabitants to abandon their beloved homes, but their removal is carried out with sympathy and kindness.

USE AIRPLANES TO WATCH PROGRESS

Airplanes are being used for the first time to watch the progress of the eruption and special signalling stations have been established at various strategical points, giving confidence to the people in the fact that they are being protected. Special units of the Red Cross, with all supplies, have been despatched to care for the homeless wanderers and provide food and shelter for them.

A new stream of lava, on the western side of Etna menaces the Giarr Junction on the Etna railroad.

According to leading vulcanologists, six new craters have opened, only two of which, however, are of the first importance. In these can clearly be seen the lava in frightful turmoil being ejected in irregular spurts amid vast clouds of fumes and ashes, forming two streams of liquid death, one of which is rolling down upon Linguaglossa, the other moving toward Sciara Pass, but threatening no inhabited places though causing immense damage to the vineyards and nut plantations.

Numberless heart-rending episodes are being enacted in this theatre around Etna. The affliction of the peasants for their homelands renders their evacuation a difficult and delicate task. In one case a woman refused to abandon her vineyard, declaring that her whole life had been given over to its cultivation, that its existence was her existence and its death her death. They endeavored to carry her away, but she rushed back to the trees and embraced and kissed them singly, calling them her children. When finally she was removed it was found she had lost her reason.

The exodus of inhabitants began soon after the first eruption, and a steady line has been slowly traveling in the direction of safety for the last two days. When they started from their homes, the people were loaded with their household treasures, but gradually along the road they have been abandoned. Mothers carrying their children, or crowded upon little hand-carts are among the fugitives, and in numerous cases stalwart peasants carry on their shoulders aged relatives unable to walk.

PRAYERS BEING OFFERED

Village priests, bearing crucifixes or the statue of the patron saint, accompany the sad procession and encourage their parishioners. The sound of chanted prayers rises above the rumblings of the eruptions and the patter of falling stones and cinders; the stricken people seem in dumb despair, hardly conscious of whither they are going, involking the saints and inquiring tremulously "what have we done to be visited by this awful scourge?"

A solemn service invoking mercy was held in the ancient beech forest at Castiglione. Owing to the shade of the trees and the darkness caused by the ashes, the light was too feeble for reading, and torches were utilized. The nearness of the stream of lava was such that before the end of the service the edge of the forest caught fire.

SPECIAL ATTRACTION AT GAIETY THEATRE

"Omar, the Tentmaker," is the photoplay at the Gaiety for Wednesday and Thursday. Guy Bates Post is the featured player.

Photographically, "Omar" fills the eye satisfactorily. It is especially happy in some of the smaller street scenes and in the potter's shop which is truly Oriental and thus educational.

So well known is Mr. Post's interpretation of Mr. Tully's conception of "Omar," that it requires no further comment than that he has transferred to the screen with its limitations his original ability in the role. It may be observed in passing that the latter part of the picture where he plays the mature and bearded Omar, gives him a better opportunity both in make-up and in acting, of which he fully avails himself. Patsy Ruth Miller as the younger Shireen gives a sympathetic performance.

For the benefit of those not familiar with Mr. Tully's play, it has to do first, with the young Omar and his love for the beautiful Shireen, of which union a daughter is born. Then Shireen is parted from him through the machinations of the evil and amorous Shah, and sold into slavery. In the second half of the picture Omar is reunited with her.

HANDLING THE BROODY HEN

New comes the time when the broody hen makes more or less trouble by quitting work. The hatching season is past, and the broody hen, instead of being a blessing, becomes something of a nuisance. The best way to begin with a broody hen is to start in the very day she begins to cluck. I have a coop 5 feet square 3 feet high in front and 2 feet high in the rear. The front is slatted. The floor is made of 1 by 3-inch strips set an inch apart and the coop is set on bricks, so air can circulate freely under it. So soon as a hen goes broody, if she is not wanted for hatching, I put her in this coop, give her all she can eat and plenty of water, and let her meditate a few days. Usually she gets over her broodiness in about 4 days and is put back in the laying pen, and begins laying a few days later.

Hens treated in this way lose from 7 to 8 days to 2 weeks before they begin laying again, and occasionally one has to be returned to the broody coop, because 4 days' confinement does not cure her. I shut one hen up recently that began laying in just a week from the time she was confined, but this is not common. My best layer lost 11 days, and one good layer which was shut up 4 days did not begin laying for 15 days after she quit.

It is said that for every day a hen is allowed to brood before an effort to break her up is made, she will remain idle for a week, but this rule does not work with me. I treat my broodies kindly, feed them well and put them back in the laying pens so soon as they cease to cluck. They are not to be blamed for going broody, as it is the course of nature for them to do so.
