

VISITING CARDS

The Mail has secured a large stock of ladies and gents visiting cards by way of a slant and is prepared to turn them over to the public at a low figure. On Monday and Tuesday of each week until further notice the price with your name neatly printed thereon either in script or old English type will be from fifty to seventy-five cents per package according to quality. On all other days the minimum price will be one dollar per package. Send in your orders at once and state the kind of type wanted. In the case of mail orders add five cents to cover postage.

TRAP NESTS

Keep a record of your laying hens and cull out the slackers. I will make you a set of wooden trap nests of the same type as used at the Fredericton Experimental station.

Eggs for Hatching

I am prepared to supply during the present season a limited number of settings of Barred Plymouth Rock Eggs for Hatching. I breed from yearling hens with trap nest, records ranging from 175 to 267, and my pen is headed by a cockerel whose dam made a record of 247 eggs in ten months in the New Brunswick egg laying contest in 1921. Already this season, eggs from this pen have shown a fertility of ninety per cent.

All orders will be filled in the order received.

PARIS UNCOVERS RE MARKABLE CASE
IN CONVICTION OF BURGLAR

Siren, 70, Goes Free; Swain, 17, in Prison — Woman Known as 'Countess Tessancourt' Obtains Suspended Sentence—May Wed Real Count—Fanny Robert Notable Figure More Than Half Century in French Capital.

Paris, May 12—Paris has produced many queer tales of affection more or less properly placed in high circles, but none evoking such interest as the case of Fanny Robert, a seventy-year-old siren, who this week was condemned to one year's imprisonment. Thanks to her friends in official quarters she got off with a suspended sentence.

Her youthful admirer, Serge de Lenz, however, was sentenced to ten years in a prison colony for a number of thefts, which won him the title of Paris's greatest society burglar. For nearly a year detectives had been uncovering evidence against De Lenz and other members of the Parisian "middle world," and finally succeeded in presenting a case to the judges without a single flaw—more than fifty burglaries absolutely proved, and eventually admitted by the young man.

De Lenz insisted that many of the articles had been given by him as tokens of love to Fanny Robert, who for years had been presented to visitors in Paris as the "Countess Tessancourt," a member of one of the oldest French families, wealthy, talented and beautiful.

How She Got Title

For the benefit of Americans who may have made her acquaintance it may be said that the courts have investigated exhaustively the woman's claim to the title and have discovered she is no relation to the Tessancourt family, beyond whatever kinship may have been attained on one hilarious night nearly fifty years ago, when in the midst of revels in Montmartre a young student poured champagne over her head and proclaimed "Herewith I create you Countess Tessancourt."

The identity of the student was never ascertained, but Fanny Robert could not be balked by such a minor detail, and when gray hairs began to interfere with her natural charm, she decided to adopt the title permanently—incidentally sidetracking the police, who had a long record of her activities in certain Parisian spheres under her former name.

During the Second Empire, Mlle. Robert seems to have been a prototype for a certain woman in a celebrated murder case, on one occasion, as the friend of a wealthy Paris manufacturer, allowing herself to be served before the guests on a huge platter, wearing a costume that would have made Eve blush, but which, according to a witness who recently told the story to police headquarters, gave inspiration for the styles of the last few years.

Won Youthful Admirer

Meeting young De Lenz at a fashionable ball, she seemed attracted to him immediately, and invited him to visit her home, where he soon became known as a connoisseur of art, despite his seventeen years. Then De Lenz took up the cocaine habit, and conducted an extensive series of society burglaries, visiting the homes of his friends and acquaintances whenever he knew they were not there. Thus he acquired art objects, furs and jewelry worth nearly 1,000,000 francs.

At first he used these as gifts to the aged "Countess," but later she made the mistake of paying real cash for those things that pleased her, thus rendering her liable to prosecution as the recipient of stolen property.

Fanny Robert's career does not end, however, with the court sentence, according to her friends. For one of her earlier conquests, mindful of her Napoleonic successes, is guaranteed her future good conduct on condition she wed him, in which event, it is asserted, Mlle. Robert will become a real instead of imaginary Countess, with a quiet chateau in central France, where she may pass the rest of her days.

CARDINAL CALLS ON CANADIANS
TO REST SUNDAYS

Toronto, May 14—Vigorous opposition to Sunday labor in the province of Quebec is voiced by Cardinal Beaudry, primate of Canada, in a manifesto issued to the clergy of his diocese.

Hitting at abuses which arise out of the carrying on of industrial labors on the Lord's Day, the cardinal calls upon Roman Catholics throughout Quebec to leave their employment if they are called upon to work on Sunday, except in cases of extreme necessity.

Observance of the Sabbath is stressed by His Eminence as equally essential to the physical and spiritual well-being of the workers.

THE LONDON
AQUARIUM TO BE THE LARGEST

London, May 10—England is soon to have the biggest aquarium in Europe, if not in the world. It is located at the Mappin Terraces in London and will be completed in June. It is to cost $500,000. More than 100,000 gallons of water will be required to fill the tanks, which will contain fish and water fauna from all parts of the world. Natural sea water will be used. This will be brought from the North Sea up the Thames and taken to the zoological gardens in barges.

PATRICIA SOBS AND COLLECTS
THE CASH

Montreal, May 12—Patricia O'Connell, the tearful Irish colleen, who used the prize hard luck story of last Autumn in Montreal, collecting various sums of money from sympathetic souls whom she informed she had been deserted by her husband, and who was deported after serving a term in Cornwall jail, is reported to have lost none of her reliance on the sob story, and to be using the same name and the same sad tale in England—even showing her old fondness for the cablegram as a means of communication with fictitious relatives.

During the past week, cables have been received every day from some firm in England by a prominent legal firm here, stating that Patricia is deserted and stranded, that her husband has flown with another love, and that she must have £100 at once.

These messages come from different parts of England, indicating that Patricia is not confining her activities to one locality. They are all addressed to one of the senior members of the firm, whom Patricia designated as her father.

While in Montreal, Patricia kept the cables to England busy wiring for money to strong people and unheard of addresses, always soliciting some sympathetic business or professional man to advance her five dollars while she waited for an answer to her cable.

She went to all the charitable organizations with her moans and tears, and even made such a touching appeal to two constables that they walked two miles to take her to her home one night, when they had intended to place her under arrest for loitering.

On another occasion Patricia kept the minister of a Montreal church waiting for two hours to perform her marriage ceremony. There was no bridegroom, however, and he had existed only in her imagination. Her subsequent arrest when she attempted to hoodwink a hotelkeeper and a clergyman at Cornwall, Ont., brought her a two months' jail sentence, followed by deportation to England.

Ended the Stiffness in his wrist

Isaac C. Mann, of Matapedia, Que., has written us as follows:

"Fourteen years ago I got the cords of my left wrist nearly severed, and for about nine months I had no use of my hand. I tried other liniments, also doctors, and was receiving no benefit. Under persuasion from a friend I got Minard's Liniment and used one bottle which completely ended my trouble. I have been using Minard's Liniment in my family ever since and find it the same as when I first used it."
