Carnegie Teaching Foundation Issues Warning Against Rapid Increase in Cost of of the School

Too Much Being Attempted and Too Little Accomplished—School No Longer Regarded as Intellectual Agency but as Preparation for Trade or Profession—Inability of Society to Bear Cost Must Bring About Radical Curtail-ments.

(Boston, Mass., Feb. 27—Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, former president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and now president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, has been giving especial attention to the increased cost of public schools, and in the 17th annual report of the foundation says that the increases in these costs are due to mistaken views of education. He points out that if the demands of the schools continue to increase at the present rate, the inability of society to pay the cost must bring about radical curtailments. The public school will be endangered unless its cost is brought within limits that the public can bear, and unless it fulfills the primary objects for which it exists.

The Reason

Dr. Pritchett says the increased cost is due partly to increase in numbers, the betterment of facilities and the improvement of teachers' salaries. But a large part of the increase is due to the fact that the school is no longer regarded as primarily an intellectual agency, but as a means for learning something of every form of knowledge, and for acquiring a preparation for a trade or profession.

In the endeavor to do all this the public schools, he says, give a smattering of many things, weaken intellectual discipline and increase expenses enormously. The conception that the public school is an agency in which any child may be taught any subject is fundamentally unsound and leads to expense beyond any man's ability to estimate.

Pupils Ill-Prepared

As a result the schools are overcrowded, he says, with ill-prepared pupils who think they are going to obtain something which the school cannot give them, and whose happiness and usefulness should be found through other means.

Return to the Feasible

In conclusion, he maintains that both financial necessity and educational sincerity require that those who are responsible for public school education shall return to a feasible and educationally sound conception of the school, that they shall frankly admit what it can do and what it ought not to attempt, and that they bend their efforts to carry out those things that are feasible and necessary. Financial sincerity and educational sincerity are to be found along the same path, he says.

In the matter of pension to teachers, the 17th annual report of the Carnegie Foundation, states that in the period of its existence the foundation has distributed $9,939,676 in retiring allowances and pensions to 1020 persons. Of that amount $787,000 has been paid to ex-Harvard University teachers, $677,000 to ex-Yale teachers, $592,000 to ex-Columbia teachers and the rest has gone to 85 other different institutions.

The total resources of the Carnegie Foundation, the report says, now amount to $26,376,000 of which $15,192,000 belongs to the permanent general endowment; $8,914,000 to a reserve fund to be spent in retirement in the next 60 years of teachers now in associated institutions; $1,277,000 to the endowment of the Division of Educational Inquiry, and $623,000 to a reserve fund to aid colleges and universities to adopt the new plan of contractual annuities. The investments are all in bonds.

DRY CRUSADE IN SCRANTON

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 27—City police today continued their crusade against prohibition violations, with the result that four saloons were raided and forty homes were searched for illicit stills. Ten stills were confiscated, as well as 150 gallons of mash and about thirty gallons of alleged whisky.

Edward Burk, Mafine Cardonia, Felix Olisky and Charles Blomski, the hotel men arrested, were released on $1,000 bail for a hearing. The four saloons yielded quantities of beer and liquor, police announced.

WANT NAME FOR THEIR BOY

Harrisburg, Feb. 27—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Uttley, florists, a week ago became the parents of a boy, but they have been unable to find a suitable name for him. Had it been a girl, the name would have been Floretta, but since it was a boy, neither can decide.

Today they put the matter up to the Quota Club, which is composed of business women. The club agreed to canvass its entire membership for a name.
