OLD AND FAMOUS CLUBS OF HARVARD UNIVERSITY WILL BE AMALGAMATED

Boston, Nov. 29—The wheels seem greased for the amalgamation of two Harvard undergraduate clubs which are both over a century old. Last night, at a meeting of the Hasty Pudding club, founded in 1795, more than two thirds of the members voted to combine with the Institute of 1770.

This is sufficient majority to permit the Pudding to amalgamate. The constitution of the Institute of 1770 requires for such a combination only the acceptance of its executive committee, which has been given, so the amalgamation will go into effect next September.

Prominent Clubs.

Both clubs are known to the public outside Harvard. Every year the Hasty Pudding puts on a musical comedy, written and acted by members, which plays at Boston theatres. The Institute of 1770 is more generally known through the club is combined with not many years ago, the D. K. E. or Dickey, whose initiations often challenge general public attention, when neophytes carry through some extraordinary lurid enterprise. The amalgamation question was put to a vote after a conference of 16 delegates, two from each Harvard club, with the officers of the Pudding and the Institute.

To Keep Traditions.

It is planned to preserve the traditions of both clubs in the combination. The new club will initiate men in their sophomore year, as has been the custom of the Institute, instead of taking them in their Junior and senior years, as has the Hasty Pudding. The Pudding shows will be presented as usual each year. As yet there is no definite decision on the name of the combined club, though the title "Institute 1770-Hasting Pudding Club" is talked of.

The club will use the Hasty Pudding building on Holyoke street which has in the past remained empty except during the brief periods of dramatic rehearsals, and for other very occasional activities. It is planned to use the $40,000 building fund of the Institute of the present Hasty Pudding Club.

AUTUMN.

Shorter and shorter now the twilight clips
The days as through the sunset gate they crowd,
And summer from her golden collar slips,
And strays through stubble fields, and moans aloud.

Save when by fits the warmer air deceives
And stealing hopeful to some sheltered bower,
She lies on pillows of the yellow leaves,
And tries the old tunes over for an hour.
