OLD POSEY'S SPIRIT OFF
HAPPY HUNTING GROUND

Blanding, Utah, May 4—Creeping unseen from the shallow grave in the unknown fastnesses of the mountains 15 miles from here, the spirit of Old Posey, century-old Indian warrior, is scheduled to partake of food left for this purpose by his friends, and make its way to the happy hunting grounds of the Indian.

Four days after burial, tradition of the Plutes has it, the spirit leaves the abode of the body and journeys to the land where there is no more death, somewhere in the bowels of the earth through an entrance in the Grand Canyon of the Arizona.

Today it is just four days since Old Posey was laid to rest, near the spot where he died, rifle in hand, the victim of a shot from the white man's weapon, resisting to the last the encroachment of the civilization he had been taught to hate as a youth, in the days just following the Mexican War.

Sworn to Secrecy

Near the grave, the location of which is known only to his son, Charley's Boy, Joe Ute, Old Mike and J. Ray Ward, United States marshal, are bread, beans and meat, placed there by his son. No other will know the location of the grave for all four have been sworn to secrecy and they never will venture near the spot again, for ill-luck follows all who knowingly tread the spot where a dead Red Man lies.

Old Posey rose to national prominence in 1914 when he and his band of warriors first attracted attention through a rebellion against the rules imposed by the white man. They wouldn't live on a reservation, preferring their tepees in the wilderness where good fishing and abundant game provided the nearest substitute to the lives of their fathers.

The rebellion was short-lived as were several in the intervening years. More than a month ago what may have been the last Indian rebellion brought posess into Allen Canyon in pursuit of Old Posey and other renegade Utes. One by one, members of the band were captured or killed until only Old Posey was left. From the hill fastnesses, he watched the posess below, occasionally firing into their midst. They returned the fire, and finally one of their wild bullets found Posey's heart. He fell behind a boulder.

Mancos Jim, a 108-year-old Indian veteran, heard the leader had died, and notified Marshal Ray, Charley's Boy dug his father's grave with a stick, following the Indian formula, and he was buried with his face to the east.

Whence They Came

Since the beginning of time, the Plutes have inhabited the earth, according to tradition. In the previous existence, a righteous man planted a tree which grew to such height that its branches penetrated the earth's crust, through a salt mine in the Grand Canyon. Through this fissure the tribe made its way to the earth's surface.

After reaching the earth, the son of a chief of the tribe died, whereupon a girl was accused of bewitching him. She denied this, and to prove that though the body of the boy was on earth, his soul was happily playing inside, she re-entered the passageway to the interior.

The tribe tried to cross the Colorado River, but finding no means of passage wandered about until a giant spider spun a web on which they crossed. They were told that if they ever crossed a life must be forfeited. They found the land rocky and untenable, and tried to get back. Their efforts were halted, however, when a youth was drowned in the attempt.

So they made their way north.

WE'LL BACK VICKS
AGAINST ANY COLD
IN FREDERICTON

We will back a jar of Vicks VapoRub against any cold in Fredericton and vicinity.

Here's our liberal offer. Get a 50c jar of Vicks at your druggist's. Use all or part of it. If you are not delighted with the result mail the top of the carton to Vick Chemical Co., 344 St. Paul Street W., Montreal, and we will gladly refund the purchase price.

Mrs. H. Scoble of Peterson Road, Kitchener, Ont., writes, "I certainly like Vicks VapoRub fine and can highly praise it for colds on the chest. I had quite a severe cold and used it every night for a week, after which time my cold was gone. I certainly can't praise it too highly."

Vicks is the external, direct treatment for all cold troubles—rubbed on—absorbed like a liniment—and, at the same time, inhaled as a vapor.

We make the above offer because Vicks certainly does give quick relief in the majority of cases.

ward, but every year, they send Plute braves to carry food and eagle feathers, dropping them along the way, to guide the spirits to the old salt mine and provide nourishment along the journey to the entrance to the Happy Hunting Grounds, where soon the spirit of Old Posey will be playing with the happy spirits of countless thousands who have preceded him.

TOOT—TOOT—TUT!

A pretty little housewife
Went shopping for a dress
And straightway told the salesgirl,
"The newest thing, I guess."

"Egyptian hieroglyphics?"
Politely coaxed the girl.
"Such patterns!" cried, housewife.
"My brain's all in a whirl."

"These are our very latest—
The Tut-styles are the rage
You'll love this black and orange
And jazzy figured sage."

"Now, Batik, too, is stunning."
The salesgirl wisely said,
And showed another counter
Piled high with green and red.

The housewife felt so queerly.
She moaned "I'm feeling sick—
My head is getting dizzy—
I must leave now and quick."

That night she said to hubby,
"I hate that ancient king.
He's spoilt all of the dress goods—
Put signs on everything."
FANNY RICHARDSON.

SELF PRESERVATION.

During a train journey an English man dashed down the corridor and put his hand in at the door of a compartment.

"Has any one any whiskey?" he asked. "A lady has fainted in the next carriage."

A flask was handed to him.

He took a liberal drink returned the flask and then said calmly:

"It always upsets me to see a lady faint."

He then went back to his own compartment.

Often it happens to a man flying from fate that he rushes into the midst of it.

HE ATE TWO DOZEN EGGS

Calais, Me., May 5—George Mulholland, local truckman bet a friend that he could eat two dozen eggs.

So George and his friend entered a restaurant and started teh test.

"Boil 'em soft—about two and a half minutes" George told the counter man "And you'd beter let me have a cup of coffee too and some bread."

The last egg went down with a protest but it went down and so did a slice of bread a cup of coffee and a glass of water.

"Well, that's one kind of a spree anyway" declared Mulholland as he pocketed his winnings and started for home.

A TEST.

It's case of genuine love if he keeps his eye on th girl and not on the taximeter. Buffalo Bison.

On that day when you're all fagged out and wilting around the collar, try some Capital Ice Cream. Its pure, rich, thick cream frozen to suit your taste. Eat more of it—it's healthy.
