New Parliament Building a Costly Structure — Public Men are Well Looked After by a Grateful Country—M a i l Representative Gives Impressions of a Visit to the Capital.

(Staff Correspondence)

Ottawa, May 20—Visiting the capi tal of the Dominion when the law makers are in session is a most in teresting experience and one not likely to be soon forgotten. Ottawa is certainly a beautiful city, with broad, level streets and boulevards, magnificent hotels, wonderful stores stately homes and numerous other outstanding features which have earn ed for it the title of "The Washing ton of the North." It is beyond a doubt one of the finest residential cities on this continent, and as the capital of Canada, the meeting place of the great council of the nation, it should be a source of pardonable pride to all the people of this Dominion. There are many things in Ot tawa calculated to impress one but the House of Parliament, erected to replace the structure destroyed by fire during the great war, easily heads the list. It is undoubtedly one of the finest public buildings in the world. The great architectural pile at Westminster which houses the mother of Parliaments, is a pretty classy affair, but in many respects it must take second place to the more modern structure on the left bank of the Ottawa River, where those by the will of the people are privileged to write M. P. after their names meet and grapple with the many problems which confront this young, growing country. Canada's new Parliament building has already cost in the neigh borhood of ten million dollars, and the great tower over the main en trance is not yet completed. The money to defray the cost of the work, however has been voted by Parlia ment and the beginning of next session should see the building entirely com pleted. During the great war Canada rolled up an enormous debt, and since that the necessity of practising the most rigid economy has been urged upon the people by politicians great and small. It was very good advice but was evidently misdirected. It should have been focused upon those who had been in charge of the work of constructing a new Parliament building to replace the structure wiped out by fire at the time when the hor rors of war had not abated. Perhaps the advice would not have been heed ed as these responsible for the erec tion of this colossal structure were evidently possessed of large ideas and had but a vague knowledge of the meaning of the word economy. With them it was a case of "Do as I say not as I do," and there was nothing for the taxpayers of the country to do but pay the piper. They paid up but they refused to look pleasant and when the opportunity came to record their verdict at the polls the government with the extravagant ideas so well ex emplified in the new Parliament build ing was weighed in the balance and found wanting.

Police on the Job

In war times when Parliament was meeting in the Victoria Museum, a stranger visiting the capital was not allowed to invade the sacred precincts without a permit signed by a member of the House, but it is different now. A person may now stroll into the main corridor, unattended, but unless he is able to satisfy the stalwart Do minion policeman on duty there that he is not a Russian Communist or not actively identified with the I. W. W. the chances are that he will get no further. "Are you going into the com mittee room?" was the question he put to the Mail representative. "Yes," was the prompt reply. "All right," said the guardian of the peace, "go ahead, but you must not go prowling about the building." The scribe never had the slightest intention of visiting the committee room, but acted on the tip of the Dominion cop and wended his way thither merely for the sake of avoiding inconvenience and possible trouble. Arriving in the committee room he found the Banking and Com merce Committee in session with Hon. A. K. MacLean in the chair, and Hon. W. S. Fielding sitting aside of the chairman as a sort of associate judge. The bill revising the banking act was under consideration, and the members of the committee, particularly the Pro gressives seemed to be on the qui vive. Among the active spirits the writer noticed Rev. William Irvine, Labor M. P. for Calgary East, who acted as organizer for the Progressives during the Federal bye election in York-Sun bury in the spring of 1921. Now Mr. Irvine, to quote the Hon. Bob Murray probably knows as much about bank ing as a goose knows about geometry, but he has been very generous with his advice to the committee as to how the banking act should be framed. He is exceptionally strong on the subject of credits, and there are many mem bers of the committee who are in clined to take him seriously. Capt. Shaw, who defeated our own R. B. Bennett in West Calgary, was also there, and was to the front with an amendment to the banking bill which the committee did not view with favor. Capt. Shaw is a tall, clean cut chap with brick colored hair, and after listening to him speak a casual ob server might be excused for express ing astonishment that the electors of a wide awake city such as Calgary would send him to Parliament in preference to a man of the recognized ability of Hon. R. B. Bennett. Still there is no accounting for the peculiar things that people will do when the political pot is boiling. The bill to re vise the bank act has been before Par liament for some weeks, and has still a long ways to go before it will be in shape to present to the House. Liberal and Conservative members are in ac cord with its principal features, but the Progressives are making a stiff fight against it. They are anxious for some reason or other to have it held up for another year, but Hon. Mr. Fielding, who has the measure in charge, has not been able to see his way clear to agree to this. The law
