New Lamp Facilitates Night Work

1 and 2, views of wires as illuminated by lineman's lamp. 3, Looking at the engine in the same light. 4 and 5, the lamp.

IN the past interruptions to telegraph service caused by damage to outside wires could only, in the majority of cases, be rectified by daylight, when the damaged section could easily be located. There is no doubt this was a disadvantage which delayed the recovery of interrupted services. Where the trouble may have been anywhere along the line between points some 20 to 100 miles apart it was not possible to take care of the interruption especially at night. To overcome the disadvantage due to night interruptions to its wires, the Canadian Pacific Railway Telegraphs provided a special electric light and all the linemen on the System were equipped with it, enabling them to successfully take care of interruptions and do their work at night as well as by day. The special light is provided with its power from the locomotive dynamo turbines with which all Canadian Pacific locomotives are equipped.

The special light in itself is of simple construction, the power is derived from the dynamo turbine from the locomotive which provides electricity for the illumination of the headlights and cab lights. A headlight globe is used and an especially designed reflector throws a beam sufficiently strong to allow working operations at a distance of 600 feet. The conducting wire attached to a socket in the cab of the locomotive is of sufficient strength to enable the operator to work any place within two car lengths of the locomotive. There is also a semi-permanent stand to which the lamp can be attached for the convenience of men working at night on bridges or, in fact anywhere that requires a steady flow of light. The lamp can also be interchanged of globes be used where there is a domestic current, but not with such good effect.

As there is so much that can affect the Telegraph System, such as fire, aurora, lightning, snow, wind and rain, the advantage of being able to locate the source of trouble cannot be overestimated and time and time again, when the lines have been seriously damaged during the night, it has been found that the electric hand lamp, which is now used throughout the System, has been of great benefit. During the past winter when the service experienced a considerable number of interruptions the lamp was often used during snow and sleet storms and not in one instance is it known of its having failed to meet all services put upon it. There is no doubt that the perfection of this lamp has been a decided progressive step in telegraph maintenance at night.

PRESIDENT HARDING SAYS HE ENJOYS BEING BUNCOED

Washington, July 12—President Harding has confessed to a characteristic often ascribed to Americans by foreigners—a fondness for being buncoed when it is done painlessly.

The confession was made in a letter written to Col. George B. Christian, father of the secretary to the President, and has a background extending into the days when Warren G. Harding was editor of the Marion Star. It was then that a stranger dropped into Marion one day, called on Editor Harding, and introducing himself as a member of the Virginia branch of the Harding family, mentioned that his cash in hand had unexpectedly run low and that a small loan would be useful. The President then as now was proud of the name of "Harding" and he extended the loan.

A few days later Mr. Harding met Judge Scofield, a leading citizen of Marion and a close friend, and told the story of the stranger's call. When he had finished Judge Scofield announced that he had been visited on the same day by the same gentleman, who described himself as a distant cousin named Scofield, and a member of the Scofield family of Virginia. The judge like the editor extended financial aid.

Laughed Over Incident

Mr. Harding and Judge Scofield had many a hearty laugh over the incident, and they laughed even more heartily on learning several weeks later that Myron T. Herrick, then a Cleveland business man but since Governor of Ohio and Ambassador to France, also had helped out in the hour of need "a cousin by the name of Herrick from Virginia who needed carfare home." But gradually Mr. Harding ceased to think of it until the other day he received a letter from Col. Christian recalling the visit of the Virginia cousin, and saying that he himself had been recently victimized in a similar way.

"I am in receipt of your letter," President Harding wrote in reply, "in which you tell me of the call upon you by the breezy and companionable chap who, after the fashion of the gentleman who was named Harding one day. Scofield another day and Herrick another day, took you in for a small loan which would accommodate him on his virtuous way. I can only sympathize with you. You remember the chap who represented himself to me as a Harding from 'Old Virginia,' and I recall that I presented him to you and that he took you in as well as me, and that you and he fought over some of the battlefields of the Civil War without your detecting any fraud in him, but you did escape being touched as I was for a small draft upon my cash account.

Enjoyed Being Buncoed

"Somehow I have always enjoyed being buncoed by that fellow. He was so clever about it that he skinned me without wounding me. One encounters so many confidence men in the activities of our present day life that it is a pleasure to meet up with an artist who can skin you without your having felt it. The thing that gets on my nerves most is the cruder and bolder confidence man who tries to put something over on me, and I know that he is trying it, and he thinks me susceptible enough to be wholly innocent of his plans.

"In other words, when you are taken in it is a joy to be taken in so beautifully that you haven't the slightest knowledge of it until you come to the later realization that a promised loan is not returned. I do not know but that it is a good thing that we have some of them in our midst at all times. It serves to remind us that one needs to be cautious without being suspicious, and also that the world is full of wonderful talent which, if only applied in righteous ways, might result in notable accomplishment. Moreover, I think it brings us to a helpful degree of humility to be reminded that there are smart chaps who can take up in without our even suspecting it."

BOSTON RED SOX
CLUB SOLD

Boston, July 11—The Boston American League Baseball Club today was sold to a syndicate of Columbus, Ohio, men by Harry H. Frazee, owner of the club since 1916. The completion of the sale and the signing of the contract, which has been periodically reported and denied for several months was announced by Robert J. Quinn, former business manager of the St. Louis American League club, representing the Ohio syndicate. Mr. Quinn announced that the sale contract had been signed after a long conference at the offices of Pillsbury, Dane and Young, attorneys. President Ban Johnson of the American League was present, as were Edward M. Schoenborn and Palmer K. Winslow of Columbus members of the purchasing syndicate and others.

HAS A NEW MAIL SERVICE

Scotch Lake, July 10—Extending back a period of over eight years the people living on the western loop of road west of the Rochbury road have been without a mail service.

Back in 1915 when the Mouth Keswick R. R. No. 1 was first established this section of people were cheated out of a mail service by a few narrow minded people who's only desire was for self.

For eight long years these people had the patience to endure such a thing. But such conditions are ended now. Thanks to H. W. Woods, District Supt. of Postal Service and a certain young man who has worked faithfully for a betterment of conditions. As a result the daily service has been established on this road and the residents are now enjoying a real good mail service with A. Yerxa as mail carrier with a fast motor car.
