AN UNDESCRIBED SPECIES.

Just exactly what is a fight fan? One wonders.

The papers have had a good deal to say about this citizen and yet they have failed to provide a fair and recognizable description of the species. To meet his requirements the press has printed a picture of Dempsey with his hair all frownsed and a picture of Gibbons with hair likewise frownsed. It has given account of the length, breadth and thickness of the Dempsey forearm and matched it with a story of the Gibbons reach, science, family, daily habits, religion, dancing feet and color of eyes. The fight fan is supposed to be eternally hungry for news about gate receipts and the binding power of contracts. It is taken for granted that the gentleman will perish unless there is a considerable amount of publicity suggesting that boxing managers have more than the average allowance of suspicion and eye teeth.

Desiring to get an exact line upon the fight fan an observer watched the crowds pouring into the arena at the Dempsey-Carpenter merry-making. It seemed to him that he had happened in upon a joint meeting of a medical society, a bar association, a bankers' congress and a merchant-tile league. Journalists so-called were there in drives. Certain signs indicated the bricklayer, the machinist and the paper-hanger. Here and there were women, all strangely refraining from acting as if they had broken a social code by coming. But of the real fight-fan, the eager-eyed, blood-hungry enthusiast of the popular magazines nothing was to be seen. He appeared to have stayed at home.

After all, what is the fight-fan? Don't you suppose that he is only the average person, no more passionately interested in seeing two men flail each other around a platform than the theater-goer is absorbed in the sight of imitation Englishmen, a handful of chorus girls and a person playing two clarionets at one time?

H. G. Wells declares that if tanks had been used by the British army in July, 1916, instead of in the September following they would have ended the war there and then. It is such statements as these which lend delight to the reading of the works of the newest historical school. For they show the reader that historians are not god-like people after all; the reader himself can talk that way without half trying.

Coue denies that he has revised his formula to read, "O hell, I am well!" But his denial will never catch up with the canard; for a sense of humor will ever interfere with the course of the chaser.

People are that way. Take the fellow who complained about the size of his income tax this year. Have you found him doing a single thing toward making his tax next year lighter?

Most women will agree that the New York woman who came into a fortune of $1,500,000 by keeping a secret earned the money.

King Boris of Bulgaria says he won't get married until he gets a steady job. Mr. Henry Peck says if he gets married he'll have one.

New England phone girls and their employers have ended their differences, but the subscriber, trying to get a number is still the innocent third party.

Just to demonstrate how busy we have been with stern reality, it can be cited that a year has passed and failed to bring out a single new breakfast food.

Not only are people living longer than did those of former generations, but there is more that is worth living for.

Dignity began to depart when folks found out that they had to step lively to remain alive.

The world's most cutting remark to her is "You look fierce with it bobbed."

When a dyspeptic sidesteps green corn, there is the height of self-denial.

Mozart's flute has been stolen from a Brussels museum. An attempt is being made to keep it quiet.

Hard coal operators and miners are holding a meeting. That is why your ears burn.

Women have gone in pretty generally for sports. Anything to wear the knickers.

A champion prize fight is like war. It doesn't settle anything permanently.

Many a man who visited Wall Street has been sorry he parked at the curb.

The machinery of world diplomacy is always reaching out for more oil.

The melen folly days have come.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

No prize fight is worth what it costs.

Los Angeles thinks it has discovered the missing link. But that's nothing; every town has one.

If a man has vision he can see his finish. Then all he needs is sense enough to postpone it.

Some people seem to think that living happily ever after is dull and old-fashioned.

Doorn reports that the former kaiser is trying to dodge his taxes. Maybe the old fellow's human after all.

They say girls don't dress to please men, but they do. They dress to please the men who design the clothes they wear.

Taxes are too high at taxpaying time. But between times we are all too public spirited to stand in the way of progress.

An old-fashioned bachelor is a man who still believes father paces the floor every night with a crying baby in his arms.

If people were to follow the Golden Rule, remarked the Man on the Car, they wouldn't give a darn whether the whale swallowed Jonah or Jonah swallowed the whale."

For Orphan's Home.

St. John Globe. The Grand Orange Lodge of New Brunswick has turned over to the N. B. Protestant Orphans' Home $10,000 in bonds which with present market appreciation and accrued interest, amounts to $350 additional. The money is to be used in the purchase of the Manchester property situated on the Manawagonish Road. While this does not fully cover the purchase, it provides a very considerable portion of the price paid for a very fine property. The directors of the Orphanage now have upwards of twenty-five acres on the Manawagonish Road and with the buildings thereon arrange to house there a considerable number of orphans under their care while plans are developed for the new construction which eventually will provide thoroughly modern accommodation for the orphans with adequate playgrounds and gardens.

To Open Beersville Mines.

Moncton Times: T. Howden of Glasgow, Scotland, engineering expert of the well known British Mining Engineering firm of Manor & Coulson, was in the city last evening after concluding an inspection of the Beersville coal mines which his expected will soon commence mining operations again after having been closed down for several years.

Father Savage Honored.

Rev. Father Savage of St. Bernard's Church, Moncton, a former curate of St. Dunstan's Church of the city has completed thirty two years in holy orders. On Wednesday his parishioners presented him with a bouquet of thirty two roses in which was secreted an envelope containing a check for $1000.

JACKSON GRATTAN WINS FREE-FOR-ALL

Woodstock, July 12—Twenty-five hundred people were at the parlor track this afternoon and witnessed Jackson Grattan win over the three fastest race horses in Canada. The track record previously held by John R. Braden, 2:07 1-4, was lowered by Jackson Grattan in the first heat to 2:06 3-4. To step 2:06 3-4 on an early July date is some stunt and at the end of each heat there was not a quarter second difference between the four horses.

The champion John R. Braden, is slipping, and Roy Grattan beat him out for second money. Dan Hedgewood proved to be the equal of his three contenders. Of greater interest, probably to Woodstock people was the showing made by the Woodstock horse Oro Fino, who fractured a bone in his ankle two years ago in the races at Pr-sque Isle and has since been out of the game. Today Oro Fino 2:03 1-4 as a three year old came back as good as ever and won the 2:14 class.

The winners today were Jackson Grattan, best time 2:06 3-4; Oro Fino, best time 2:10 1-4; Helen Witt, best time, 2:18 1-4 and Batton, best time 2:16 1-4.

Large Attendance

The Chautauqua program on Thursday attracted as good attendance as earlier in the week. Hon. Philip Whitwell Wilson, former member of the British House of Commons and London journalists, delivered a most interesting address in which the Imperial spirit was put to the fore. The Dunbar Cathedral Choir was heard in some magnificent vocal selections afternoon and evening. At the evening performance Junior Chautauqua prizes were presented. Tonight "Crossed Wires" the chief play of the program will be presented.

Recovered Stolen Property

A young lady who had her shoes and stockings stolen from the ladies' dressing room at the West End bathing beach recovered them Thursday. The articles were noticed in use by a young colored girl. The latter upon being asked about the matter said she had purchased them for two dollars from a young white girl. Both of these girls had been observed at the bathing beach at the time of the theft. The colored girl denied all knowledge of the theft.
