VACATION BUNK.

There is a great deal of "bunk" talked in the matter of vacations. A vacation is a pleasant thing to look forward to and even sometimes fairly pleasant in the performance. Never so good as anticipated of course. But the necessity of so much vacation as the average business man takes is very seriously open to question. If you don't worry about your work, your work is as good for you as play. If you find it both pleasant and possible to take a vacation now and then, do so. But don't try to fool yourself and your friends by insisting that you are run down and need it. An argument in favor of a long holiday is usually a lazy man's defense.

Speaking of bunk there is a great deal of bunk talked about business too. We pretend business is good when it isn't. We fool nobody. We pretend business is bad when it is not bad. And we fool nobody. Of course business must be bad sometimes. It always has had periods of being bad and always will have. Those things come and go. For business to fluctuate is normal. We live in a normal country. Be thankful for that. And thank God we are strong enough in this country to stand the ebb and flow of the tide. Perhaps the business world needs more sense and less lung-made psychology.

MR. HANSON'S VIEWPOINT.

Mr. R. B. Hanson, in discussing the report of the committee on the Murdock charges in Parliament last week is reported by Hansard to have said:—

"Let me say to the Prime Minister that he will be doing no greater service politically to gentlemen on this side of the House than if he retains the Minister of Labor in his government for he will have to defend him on every platform from Vancouver to Halifax and I wish him much joy in the effort. I see no better political strategy, if you want to put the matter on that plane, more favorable to gentlemen on this side than keeping the government on the defensive with regard to its personnel; God knows it is weak enough and it cannot smell much worse than by the retention of the Minister of Labor."

Coming from one who back in 1917 stumped York County on behalf of a government that had been guilty of almost every crime in the calendar, the above deliverance from Mr. Hanson is certainly rich. If putting a public man on the defensive is good political strategy then Mr. Hanson should approve the activities of a certain element of his own party in this city which is now after his political scalp.

Mr. E. Guss Porter, Conservative M. P., for West Hastings, Ont., has resigned his seat in Parliament as a protest against the action of the House in exonerating Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, from the charge which he had preferred against him. Mr. Porter has executed a fine gallery stunt. He has represented a hard boiled Orange constituency for over twenty years and at the last election had a majority of over 1100. The chances are that if he felt there was any danger of being deprived of his seat he would not have resigned. If the Liberal government did business on the lines of the Meighen administration it would square things with Mr. Porter by leaving the seat vacant for a year or two.

There was a long and animated discussion in Parliament last week on the mention to adopt the report of the Privileges committee on the Murdock charges, and we notice from Hansard that while those eminent New Brunswick statesmen, Hon. J. B. M. Baxter and G. Burpee Jones, maintained a discreet silence while the debate was in progress they stood up and voted like little men to condemn the Minister of Labor.

The Fredericton Publicity Association was organized at a meeting of citizens held on Saturday evening.

Its object is to make the capital city of New Brunswick better known to the outside world, particularly its attractions as a place of residence. It will be generally conceded that the object of the new association is a very worthy one and we wish it every success.

There was an article in a recent medical journal concerning a man who lived 17 hours without a brain in his head and for some reason or other it was treated as a sensation.

Let us be grateful. The reason virtue doesn't get on the front pages is because it isn't unusual.

Its funny about nature, making prunes more healthful than strawberries.

There is nothing much sweeter than a cool wave after a hot spell.

Life is a compromise between what we want and what we can get.

"My fear for civilization" remarked the Man on the Car "comes from the rapid disappearance of hairpins along the paths of progress."

Human strife occupies most of the space in history. The newspapers have a precedent for giving the worst news a conspicuous place.

When everybody has an auto the problem of the new rich will be to find something to ride in or walk.

After reading the meanness that gets into the current news, sometimes almost completely monopolizing it, turn back into the history of the centuries. The comparison convinces us that the devil used to have a snap.

JUMPS FROM ENGINE TO SAVE GIRL IN WATER

A Railway Fireman Proves Himself a Real Hero.

Boston, June 30—All the stage settings that figure in the most popular movies featured a rescue in East Boston today when a fireman on the Narrow Gauge railway leaped from his engine to rescue a little girl who had fallen from a trestle into the water.

Francis Little, aged 8, East Boston is the girl who was saved. The hero is Frank McCarthy, who lives in Winthrop.

The girl was walking along the railroad trestle that spans a creek lying between World War Memorial Park and Marginal street. By reason of its height from the water and its general character, it is known as "Dizzy Bridge." It offers a short-cut and is patronized considerably by pedestrians despite the risk involved.

Frances was walking toward East Boston. When half-way across the bridge she heard a train approaching in the same direction and became frightened. As she increased her pace to cross the bridge to safety she lost her balance and pitched into the water.

The engineer of the train saw the girl on the tracks and stopped on the bridge. McCarthy saw the girl fall into the water. The next instant he stepped from the engine poised for an instant on the step and leaped into the water.

The tide was half-out at the time and while there was plenty of water to drown an eight-year-old girl, it was not over the head of a tall man.

McCarthy brought the girl to the surface and helped her into the train, which was run into the East Boston terminal but a short distance away.

There an ambulance took Frances to the East Boston Relief station. She was found to be suffering from immersion and bruises sustained in her fall. Her condition is not believed to be serious.

LITTLE STORIES OF THE TOWN

Which Are the Prettiest.

Some young men had an argument the other evening as to whether there were more pretty blonde girls in Fredericton, than of their dark-haired sisters. It was finally decided that they were about evenly divided. It was also agreed that the two prettiest girls in the city are blondes.

Easier To Insure Men Nowadays.

Insurance men find it very much easier to sell life insurance today than twenty-five years ago. Every man takes some insurance as a matter of course. A wholesale merchant and a doctor each carry $100,000 insurance, which is said to be the largest amount carried in the city.

Marysville Cotton Mill A Great Asset.

A retail merchant says that it was not realized until this spring what an asset to the community is the Marysville cotton mill. For some months the mill has been running only three days a week which put the employees in a very hard place to make both ends meet. Now the mill has closed down for two weeks which makes it worse. The merchants of Marysville, Devon and Fredericton all feel the effects of the curtailment. As a merchant said, "Marysville people are good spenders."

$3,000 Prize Comedy Drama.

Last year's prize-winning play "Crossed Wires," was presented at Chautauqua months before it appeared in New York and Philadelphia. New York is now waiting for "Their Honor the Mayor." But first this $3,000 prize play is ours. It is one of the finest comedies ever presented on Chautauqua. It is said to contain 30 snickers, 145 laughs, 50 roars and an eye-dropper full of tears. Season tickets, $3.00, for twelve high-class entertainments, July 17-23.

To Aid Bridge Lighting.

The Women's Institute of Barker's Point on Saturday conducted a food sale at the residence of Mrs. S. Rideout in aid of the lighting of the covered bridge across the Nashwaak River. From the sale of cake $6.40 was realized and from a guessing contest $3.20.
