PROTECTION DEFINED

That everybody is not deceived by the specious tariff rates for the benefit of the farmer in the United States is once more proved. In an article in the "California Farmer" David Starr Jordan, President of the Leland Stanford University, in commenting upon the United States farmer's condition says:

"Next to the war comes the load of the protective tariff, shutting closer his foreign markets and increasing overhead expenses at home. "Protection" is a device to raise home prices by weakening or preventing foreign competition. It was primarily a scheme to promote manufacture in a land almost wholly agricultural. Hamilton tried successfully by this means to develop cities in a land in which the chief towns were villages only. In this he succeeded far beyond his desire, for the infant industries have never let go, and the biggest city in the world is ours, swollen with the odds and ends of all Europe, while the lusty infants now grown to giant size dominate our politics. They own senators and legislatures controlling at need one or both political parties, and for the most part the votes of even the farmer himself."

Prof. Jordan is right when he describes protection as a device to raise prices by weakening or preventing foreign competition. To put it in another way, protection benefits twenty-five per cent of the population of a country at the expense of the other seventy-five per cent.

MEN'S CONVERSATION

Ohio State University psychologists announce figures to show what men talk about when in the company of women. These figure-sharks say that seventeen per cent of a man's conversation, when talking to women, is about himself. Three per cent is about women. The other eight per cent is given over to amusements, sports, business, weather and lesser matters of no importance. Very interesting if true. Did you ever take the trouble to analyze your own conversation and the conversation of people who talk to you? That is also very interesting. How much time do you give to making remarks that might just as well be left unsaid? How much useful information do you contribute in your conversation?

THOSE GOOD OLD DAYS

Elderly people are wont to boast about the good health of their generation and of their fathers and grandfathers. "Appendicitis or diabetes or arterio sclerosis was not known in our father's day," they boast. They scoff at modern medical methods. Don't be misled. What they say is true, but it is also true that the death rate was higher by a surprising percentage in those days than it is now. Doctors may have invented some new names for old ailments, and perhaps they have invented some new ailments but the contribution of medical science to the health and happiness of mankind in the last fifty years is beyond reckoning.

There were 700,000 bathtubs made in the United States last year, and it is expected that a million will be this year's output. But that's hardly up to the automobile output. Between flivvers and bathtubs, speed seems to have the preference.

Clean-up Week as an annual fixture is not inconsistent with the principles of good housekeeping. Every housewife, however spic and span her house may be from day to day, knows the necessity of Spring house-cleaning.

In the season when a fire is too warm and the house is too cold without one, comes the realization that it is difficult to throttle down the furnace to slow speed.

New York's "King of Bootleggers" has abdicated, "for the sake of his family." Congratulations are due the heir apparent.

Howard Carter regards the curse of King Tut with supreme indifference. The curses of living Egyptians he has met have been the real thing.

What has become of the old-fashioned man who celebrated Easter by trying to see how many eggs he could eat?

The friends who dropped the cigar ashes on the rug are never around when the time comes to beat it.

A light vote falls as heavily as any other on the candidate at the bottom of the pile.

Gentlemen of shady financial character will please note that Kite Day does not refer to bank checks.

Robins are optimists. In the midst of house hunting they have time for a song.

Not even the automatic pistol shoots unless some human manipulates it.

Why are not people as interested in the nation's money as they are in their own?

I.O.D.E. ACTIVE DURING THE PAST YEAR

er Last year the Provincial President spoke to the student teachers of the Normal School on the War Memorial Scheme.

Trafalgar Day in October is not so generally observed The Regent and Educational Secretary of the Lord Sackville Chapter visited the schools in Sackville and asked the teachers to give ten minute talks on the meaning of Trafalgar Day and what it meant to the pupils. This is a custom which might well be followed by all the Chapters.

In conclusion I woud ike to congratulate the members on the excellent work they have done. The result of our year's work in dollars and cents is very creditable. The most lasting results, however, must be found in the influence the Order has exerted in the training and education of the young, and in the lives of the people whom we have touched in passing, who will be more loyal members of the British Empire because ideals of loyalty and patriotism have been kept before them. We have reached the goal toward which we have journeyed throughout the past year, we have reachel the mountain top and we have come to the point of departure. Let us go back to the valleys and plains with new ideals and enlarged vision, to make new beginnings, resolved that the year upon which we are just entering will find us ready to answer the calls of service which will come to each of us.

Much has been done, but much more remains to be done. Let us not be satisfied with that which has been attained, but keeping before us the spiritual basis, and high ideals upon which the Order was founded, go forward to still greater achievements, and the realization of the splendid motto of our Order,

One flag, one throne, one empire.

Respectfully submitted,

HELEN J. COY,
Provincial Secretary.

FINE PHOTOPLAY AT CAPITOL THEATRE

"The Shock" is the Photo Play at the Capitol for the last half of the week featuring Lon Chaney.

The San Francisco earthquake serves as the feature thrill in this picture. The climax is skillfully approached and the audience is taken quite unawares. All of a sudden the earth starts to shake, buildings crumble and flames lick their evil tones around the doomed city and it is all fairly convincing too. Lon Chaney plays the leading male role; his work it quite up to his standard and in some scenes he even breaks the record. What a pathetic suectacle he is when as an apparently hopeless cripple he comes upon the girl he loves in the arms of another man. His facial expressions are wonderful and he nearly breaks your heart when the big tears leap to his eyes.

Virginia Valli is sweet and appealing as the girl and Christine Mayo is convincing in the wicked character of Queen Anne.

Here is a dramatic story full of the intrigue of the underworld. It is well acted and holds the interest throughout. A good comedy is an additional attraction.

Still Alarm This Morning.

A chimney fire at the home of Harold J. Walker, 225 York street called the firemen out on a still alarm at eight o'clock this morning. There was no damage.
