CONSERVATIVE POLITICIANS ARE MAKING LITTLE HEADWAY WITH THEIR SCANDAL CAMPAIGN

(Special to The Daily Mail by a member of the Parliamentary press gallery.)

Ottawa, June 26—There has been little of special interest in the doings of parliament itself in the House during the past week, but there have been some happenings of national moment, nevertheless, not directly connected with the regular parliamentary program. The Committee on the Murdock charges has reported; the Hotel Scribe matter has been up before the special committee on Canadian National Railway estimates; and the strike of the postal employees has been dealt with.

The Committee on the Murdock charges has been made to the House, but not yet dismissed. It finds, in brief, that the Minister of Labor "did nothing in connection with the withdrawal of his money from the Home Bank contrary to his obligation as a Minister of the Crown, or in derogation of his office and the honor, dignity, and traditions of parliament, and the charge submitted, to the committee for investigation, so far as it affects the honour of Mr. Murdock, is entirely disproved." The simple facts of the case were that the Minister had on deposit in the Home Bank a sum of about four thousand dollars, which he was saving up in order to buy a home. He withdrew this money three days before the bank failed. Afterwards, feeling that no depositor of the bank should suffer through any act of his, but not admitting culpability of any kind, he returned this money to the liquidator of the bank. The whole case "revolved around the question of whether

Mr. Murdock knew from discussions in the cabinet council before he withdrew the money that the bank was about to fail. Cabinet ministers are forbidden, on oath, to disclose anything which takes place at council meetings, and although several members of the cabinet, including the Prime Minister and Mr. Murdock himself, appeared and testified, all the members of the committee of investigation, including the Conservative representatives, agreed that it would not be proper to ask them to speak of any discussions in the council.

No Headway on Scandal Campaign.

The evidence of the Deputy-speaker of the House, however, was to the effect that he had advised Mr. Murdock of the probable coming failure of the bank within eight or nine days before the money was withdrawn or before the position of the bank was known to the government, so that he could have acted on this information and as a matter of fact he claimed that he had done so. The committee, therefore, had no other course than to clear the Minister of the somewhat trifling charge of having withdrawn his own money from the bank. Thus, another of the much-advertised Conservative charges against members of the government was dissolved in thin air. The Opposition is making such poor headway with its scandal campaign that it is confidently expected they will abandon that line of attack as hopeless, and will soon begin to endeavor to justify their existence in some more dignified and constructive manner.

Hotel Scribe Purchase Justified.

The Hotel Scribe affair has furnished the Opposition with food for its propaganda department for many months. They argued the appointment of this special railway committee mainly with the idea of publishing to the world the iniquities of Sir Henry Thornton who has been a constant target for attack as head of the Canadian National Railways ever since he took the position and for no other apparent reason than that he was selected by the government. Following the splendid showing the Canadian National made this year under Sir Henry's management the Opposition became more desperate than ever, and it was felt that something would have to be done to counteract the effect of this on the public. Something must be done to "get" the head of the Canadian National, whose good work was beginning to reflect credit on himself and the government. Hence the pushing of the Hotel Scribe matter.

It has now come up before the Committee, Sir Henry Drayton has done his best to make a case out of it and has lamentably failed. The evidence all went to show that the purchase of the property was a good move for the Canadian National. It has given them offers for their continental business on the best street in Paris, and most interesting of all, Sir Henry Thornton told the Committee that they have recently had offers for the property at an increase over the price paid for it. When all this was brought out in the committee under the skillful questioning of George W. Kyte, M. P., Sir Henry Thornton threw up his hands in despair, and it is not likely that anything more will be heard about the Hotel Scribe.

Conservative Hopes Disappointed.

The electors in British Columbia have proven a bitter disappointment to the Conservatives here. They had everything prepared for a jubilation. The organizer of the Conservative party, Dr. Tolmi, M. P., and several other of the Conservative members have been absent from their place in Parliament for weeks, campaigning against Premier Oliver. Mr. Meighen had another scathing speech ready to point out another instance of Liberalism going to the dogs in Canada; but it is all off. The Conservative leader in British Columbia, Mr. Bowser, is finally eliminated from politics, and while the Liberal majority is small, it is sufficient to show the way the tide is running.

The Postal Strike.

The strike of postal employees, which threatened to tie up the whole postal service of Canada, and would have done so but for the firm attitude of the government, furnishes another illustration of the failure of Sir Robert Borden's attempt to take control of the Civil Service out of the hands of parliament and hand it over to a more or less irresponsible commission. The attitude of civil servants now appears to be that they feel they are responsible neither to the government nor the parliament. Every suggestion on the part of the government that the Civil Service Act should be amended so as to give the
