With crowds in the galleries joining in until pandemonium became deafening the Reds howled down all attempts at parliamentary procedure.

HOTEL DUSTMAN KEEPS ON WORKING DESPITE LEGACY

New York, May 28—News that a legacy of $50,000 had been left him failed to jolt a dustman from the grasp of Ralph Evans 60 years old a dustman at the Hotel Waldorf.

"Ha! Ha! That's the best one I've heard in years," was Evans' reply when a lawyer stopped beside him while he was dusting in the Hotel "Peacock Alley" and informed him that his brother had left him a small fortune.

"I guess I'll keep this job until I get my inheritance, Evans said I've got this job and as long as I keep it I know I'll eat regularly."

"If I do get all the money the lawyers say I will, I may take a little vacation. Then I guess I'll take a suite upstairs and see how it feels to live like the swell that prance through the 'Alley' which I've been keeping dusted these five years."

FREDERICTON EXHIBITION

Outside Application for Space More Numerous Than Usual — Arrangements Are Proceeding.

The directors of the Fredericton Exhibition will meet tonight. Arrangements in connection with the exhibition to be held next September are proceeding steadily. Greater interest on the part of outside exhibitors is being manifested. Four new exhibitors from Montreal recently applied for space. Increased interest is general and the prospect for a successful fair grow brighter.

Amusements already are booked. More acts of the first flight seem available. This is largely due to the fact that animal diseases in several Western States have made it impossible to hold fairs there this year. Show people as a result are eager to book engagements in the East. The exhibition race meet has good prospects.

FLOWERS SENT BY SLAYER CLEW IN BOY'S DEATH

Florist Says Their Purchaser Nervous and Hurried.

CLUES ARE FEW

Son of Chicago Millionaire is Murder Victim.

Chicago, May 28—The body of Robert Franks 13, victim of kidnappers and son of Jacob Franks millionaire manufacturer was laid to rest in Rosehill Cemetery.

While two readers of the Christian Science faith were conducting the brief services, detectives were searching for the purchaser of a floral piece received at the Franks home accompanied by a card on which was written "Sympathy of George Johnson." George Johnson was the name signed to several letters received at the Franks home demanding ransom money of $10,000 for the boy's return and was the name given by a man in telephone conversations with the father. Authorities obtained a good description of the man from the florist who said the purchaser appeared nervous, wrote and destroyed several cards before he seemed satisfied then hurriedly left the shop and entered a waiting automobile.

Franks was kidnapped as he left a private school Wednesday afternoon. His nude body was found in a culvert several miles south of his parents' home the next morning.

Before the discovery of the body the father had received letters and telephone calls demanding ransom money and instructions where to take it.

As the casket was carried from the home hundreds of curious bystanders removed their hats.

The father, supported by two friends followed the casket with tottering step.

As Mrs. Franks left the house she was escorted by a policeman one of the guard stationed there as the result of threats made since the killing of Robert. More than a dozen police men were in front of the house.

Despite the fact that more than 5000 police and detectives spurred on by a $10,000 reward for the apprehension of the slayers are working on the case they are admittedly no closer to a solution than they were when the boy's body was found.

IRISH QUESTION RAISED IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS

London, May 27—The death of the Earl of Bandon, one of the twenty-eight representative Irish Peers in the House of Lords raises for the first time the question whether Ireland is to continue being represented in the British upper chamber.

Bandon was the first Irish Peer to die since the establishment of the Free State, and the Anglo-Irish treaty contains nothing regarding the representation of Ireland in the Lords.

The customary procedure hitherto when a representative died was for the other Irish peers to meet and elect his successor, but the machinery by which this was effected now does not exist, and it is supposed that unless new legislation is adopted, Irish representation in the Lords will be reduced and finally cease as the present peers, who are chosen for life, successively pass away.

The pretty little Italian Princess Mafalda who is here with her parents rode in the carriage with Prince Henry, a younger son of King George and Queen Mary. The Duke of York who should as the second son have ridden in the carriage remained in a motor car in the rear of the procession.

POLICE FORCE ON RAMPAGE, NOT ARRESTED

San Francisco, May 28—"Get the town marshal quick!" shouted a woman to the grocer in a small village in Marin County as she sought safety within his store. "There's a drunken man driving an auto all over town, and he'll kill somebody!"

The grocer watched a careening auto pass. He then sent the woman home, telling her he would look for the marshal.

"Why don't you do something? That man will hit somebody sure. Where's the marshal?" asked a stranger, who also had sought refuge in the grocery.

"That's just it," replied the grocer. "The bird in the auto is the marshal."

CHINESE LADY BANDITS USE ROUGH TACTICS

France May Get the Ray.

London, May 28—British United Press)—France appears likely to get the death ray, invented by Griddell Matthews a Britisher.

Angered by his own Government's lower offer for the allegedly diabolical invention which may revolutionize war, Matthews packed his bags in a huff and announced he was taking an airplane to Paris to do business with the French government.

Some skepticism on the part of the British Air Ministry appeared to have added to the inventor's indignation. After a two-hour demonstration held in secret behind barred and guarded doors at Matthews' laboratory, officials of the ministry reported to the Government on the merits of the death ray. The Government communicated with Matthews proposing "another simple but more conclusive test."

POLITICIANS LOST IN HOTEL, FIND KITCHEN

Philadelphia, May 27—It isn't often that chefs in the kitchen department of the Bellevue-Stratford see five men powers in the political world of this city, walking about in a maze and dodging waiters with trays of dishes.

And it isn't often that the said five political leaders find themselves in such a predicament.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, W. Harry Baker, chairman of the state Republican committee; Congressman Vare, Senator Pepper and Charles B. Hall, president of city council, held a "side-bar" conference in the Clover room at the hotel while the other Republican leaders assembled in the ballroom downstairs. When the palaver ended the leaders found the entrance to the ballroom blocked by spectators, and, thinking to avoid the jam, they made their way to an ante-room which they thought led to the back-stage section.

A number of locked doors greeted them and finally they found themselves in the hotel kitchen, the target for the curious eyes of chefs and waiters. After a few minutes the leaders located the right door and made their way to the stage portion of the ballroom.

ATTITUDE OF CANADA IS CRITICISED

Refusal to Ratify Lausanne Treaty Discussed in London.

A SERIOUS ISSUE

The Times Says International Status of Empire Involved.

(By H. N. Moore, British United Press Correspondent)

London, May 28—Canada's refusal to ratify the Lausanne Treaty, as revealed in the correspondence between the British and Canadian governments tabled yesterday, is not only disquieting to Imperialists but is likely to have a pronounced effect upon the existing relations between Great Britain and Turkey.

One of the points left unsettled by the Treaty was the future of Mosul, the oil city of Mesopotamia. The Turks are still demanding control of the territory, which the British contend lies within the border that marks the area over which Britain holds a mandate, and there seems little likelihood of a settlement of this question before next July at the earliest. The dispute then will be automatically referred to the League of Nations for settlement.

Certain extremists in Angora are already protesting that they will refuse to acknowledge the jurisdiction of the league in this matter if the decision goes against Turkey, and it is believed here that Canada's publication of her definite refusal to ratify will strengthen the attitude of this group.

The relations between the Dominion and the Motherland which the correspondence might be expected to raise is philosophically viewed by the British, who refuse to believe that the action taken by Ottawa heralds any real change in the constitutional status of the nations within the Empire. The only fear now expressed is that Canada is coming more and more under the economic and cultural influence of the United States.

MOTHER OF VICTIM ATTENDS TRIAL DAILY

New York, May 28—One of the most interested spectators at the trial of Harry L. Hoffman, motion picture operator on trial for the murder of Mrs. Maud A. Bauer, is Mrs. Kate Pero, the slain woman's mother.

Mrs. Pero has already been on the witness stand, and testified concerning the man who offered a life to her daughter, shortly before the pretty young matron's body was found on a lonely Satten island road.

Mrs. Pero would not identify Hoffman as the man because of distance. Policeman Matthew J. McCormack, a veteran of 20 years, has positively identified Hoffman as the man he had seen driving a sedan in Richmond Turnpike within one and one-half miles of the spot and within a few minutes of the time when the body of the woman was found on the afternoon of March 25. The testimony of the officer was only a bit less dramatic than the identification previously by 13-year-old Barbara Fahs.
