NOTED GUIDE SAW HIS FIRST MOVIE IN SEVENTY SIX YEARS

Montreal, Aug. 17—The immortal Robert Burns expressed a desire to "see ourselves as others see us" but the shock of doing so almost induced collapse on the part of Jimmie Robertson, noted Scottish-Indian guide of the Lake St. John district, when he combined this experience with seeing at the same time, his first motion picture. Jimmie is one of the guides who conducted the party which last January opened the Blanc Bec Trails, tourist snowshoe journeys in the Northern Quebec woods, and in the party who made the journey, besides Canadian National Railways officials, was a motion picture man with his camera.

During the inaugural journey over the forest trails, the guides, including Jimmie, who is now 77 years of age, showed great interest in the motion picture cameras and were more than willing to pose with their dog teams, whenever requested, in order that intending tourists could be shown, through the medium of the films, exactly what awaited them on these new winter holidays.

The film was completed and made ready for distribution among the General Agents of the Canadian National Railways in Canada and the United States, and yesterday the event of events in the life of Jimmie Robertson took place. Though he has been all over the North Country, up to the shores of James Bay and Hudson's Bay in the course of his half century of guiding and trapping in the wilderness, his visits to cities such as Montreal have been very few and far between. And during the lull between fishing and hunting seasons, Jimmie seized the opportunity to visit the Metropolis.

Then he reminded the Canadian National Railways photographer of a promise to show himself in the movies and the promise was kept; the film of the Blanc Bec Trail being specially screened for Jimmie's benefit.

"Dat ain't me," said Jimmie at first, and even when he appeared on the screen with his beloved lead dog "Dempsey" he refused to be convinced. Then another shot showed Jimmie and his son Isaac frying bacon over a lunch fire at the side of a frozen lake.

Jimmie smiled, then laughed and the laugh swelled to a roar.

"Sure, dat's me all right," he admitted, "but I didn't t'ink I looked so darn funny, me!"

And the movie had to be run three times before Jimmie was quite satisfied that he remembered every scene and would be able to return to his home at Pointe Bleue, on the shores of Lake St. John and tell the rest of the dwellers in that Indian half-breed village just what it felt like to be "in the movies" and to see himself there afterwards.

SESQUI AUCTION MADE RATHER POOR RETURNS

Philadelphia, Aug. 17—The Sesqui-Centennial auditorium built at a cost of approximately $500,000, brought only $4,800 when it was sold at auction.

The Palace of Education was another costly building that was sold at considerable sacrifice. It was bid in by Pincus Newman, head of the Newman Housewrecking Company, Cleveland, O., for $10,750.

These structures were among 81 buildings throughout the Exposition grounds auctioned.

For at least 10 minutes after the start of the sale, the scene of many notable gatherings during the Sesqui including the national convention of the American Legion, lacked bidders.

But within a short time spirited bidding began and although Addison Freeman, the auctioneer, exhorted and pleaded with the prospective buyers, he finally was forced to award the auditorium to Philip E. Wright, a dealer in pig iron.

A little white cottage, 24 feet square, next was placed on the auction block and was sold to Robert Miller for $150.

The building had been used for an office by the Outdoor Amusement Company, but Miller, who was accompanied at the sale by his wife and two children, said he would move it to a lot of ground which he owns at Sheepslane and Penrose Ferry avenue and use it for a dwelling.

The famous Alpin Haus, where Mayor Kendrick dined the notable who visited the city during the exposition, was sold for $1,800. Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, and Gene Tunney, who dethroned him, were both entertained in the Alpine Haus before their match at the Sesqui-Centennial Stadium.

Nobody seemed to want the block-house reproduction of Fort Pitt, when it was offered for sale. Mr. Freeman was finally able to obtain a bid of $10.

The original Fort Pitt is at Pittsburgh and its reproduction at the Sesqui attracted large numbers of visitors.

Refreshments stands brought from $6 to $10 while odd lots of lumber originally used as platforms for Indian war dances and other amusement features were sold for $100.

In a certain public institution the air was not exactly suggestive of attar of roses.

"Pretty stuffy in here, isn't it?" said a visitor to the attendant in charge.

"You find it warm?"

"It isn't the heat, it's the humanity" was the quiet reply.

Vacation is what puts a lot of shortening in the dough.

PARENTS JUST INSTITUTIONS SAYS PASTOR

Newark, N. J., Aug. 17—Fathers and mothers are regarded just as institutions by some young people today. Father is regarded as a convenient banker and mother an easy way of getting to father. Thus spoke the Rev. Dr. J. Alfred Kaye, native of Scotland, pastor of the New Court Congregational Church of TOLLINGTON Park, London, Eng., preaching for the first time in America at the Old First Presbyterian Church here.

Dr. Kaye expressed himself in epigrams frequently as for example:

"It's not a sin to be depressed. You had better worry if you're never depressed."

"The man that is never down is never up. Give me the soul that sometimes sink to the depths if it knows how to soar to the heights."

Some people say the years from 17 to 25 are the most dangerous. I don't think there is any year of life that it not dangerous. Middle life is as dangerous a time as any other.

"You always make a mistake if you try to estimate a person's character by what you see of him on public or state occasions."

"The reward of life is never to the easy-going and self seeking but to the stained and scarred in the battle of life."

"There are things God wants to do in this world and can't do because you are in the way."

"We're here to help God make a better world. Creation is not a finished process."

"Many young people have a fundamentally wrong philosophy of life. 'Fundamentally, life is not a firstclass hotel where you can get just what you want by pressing buttons. Life's a hospital ward where the sick and suffering and dying are and where there are fevered throats to cool and help to be given."

"Let me assure you, young people the way of pleasure you are following ends in disillusionment and death. Forget about happiness; it's an elusive goddess. I challenge you to deny that the happiest people are the people who are doing for others."

COSGROVE WON OUT ON THE VOTE OF THE SPEAKER

The Dail Has Adjourned
Until October 11th — Two By-Elections to be Held Soon.

Dublin, Aug. 16—The Cosgrave government, by the narrowest of margins today weathered the political storm caused by the decision of the 45 Fianna Fail Republicans led by Eamon De Valera, to take the oath of allegiance and their seats in the Dail.

After a much shorter debate than had been anticipated and with no striking sensations, a Laborite motion of non-confidence in the Cosgrave government, which had been expected to result in the defeat of the government was defeated, but only by the casting of the deciding vote by the Speaker when a tie resulted on the motion, there being 71 votes for and against it.

This upholding of the government, which created great astonishment in political circles, had the important effect of enabling President Cosgrave to move adjournment of the Dail, permitting him to remain in power during the recess.

Adjourned Until Oct. 11.

At first he proposed a three months' adjournment, but this did not find favor among some of his supporters and eventually he moved an adjournment until Oct. 11, which was carried. The decision to adjourn until Oct. 11 was brought about mainly through the intervention of a member in behalf of the De Valera party.

The announcement this morning by Captain William Redmond, leader of the National League of Deputies in the Dail, that his party would vote for the Labor motion of non-confidence, had been thought certain to assure the defeat of the government, but at the last moment one of Captain Redmond's members failed to record his vote and thus saved the government from defeat.

Two By-elections.

There are two by-elections now pending in the city and county of Dublin and President Cosgrave indicated that if these elections were against the government he would ask the Speaker to summon the Dail specially forthwith. This will place the fate of the government obviously in the hands of these two elections and was expected to lead to exceedingly keen contests.

The debate today was calm and decorous throughout. The speeches raised no references to the past that could provoke recriminations. Mr. De Valera's followers apparently had received orders to remain silent.

CHIEF JUSTICE OF MACHIAS DEAD

Winnipeg, Aug. 16—Chief Justice T. G. Mathers, of the Court of King's Bench, died this morning in Mayo Hospital at Rochester, Minn., according to private advices received here. Chief Justice Mathers had recently undergone an operation and was progressing favorably when a sudden turn for the worse set in.

PANEL OF LEAVES.

The leaves are never still whether they be long, ragged fronds of coco palms aslant like sails, thrust into the wind like windmill paddle whether they be dusky priest-fingers of breadfruit foliage, dark green of mango or lighter stars of kukui leaves—
they are always astrir.
The leaves are never still.

So the fantastic jungles of the brain are never without motion
Even in sleep the strange variegated foliage stirs;
tendrils coil and grip, and the restless mutation goes on.
There, too, the dead leaves loosen and fall,
but are not forgotten.
Each leaves its scar on the stem;
they are not forgotten.

The leaves are never still.
